100 m.p.h. chase drama on Ontario streets

A 29-year-old Ontario man has been booked into the West End jail after leading Ontario police on a hair-raising 18-minute chase Saturday along local streets at speeds estimated at 80 mph and on the San Bernardino Freeway at a speed exceeding 100 mph.

Facing charges of battery on three police units, drunken driving, and driving without a drivers license is Russell Arnold McClements, 1352 W. Fifth St., employed as a winery loader.

Ontario police were alerted at 6:52 a.m. by Corona units pursuing a driver wanted for reckless driving and possible hit-and-run.

They picked up the chase westbound on the Pomona Freeway at Vineyard Avenue, and said the pursuit went as follows:

—Northbound on Euclid Avenue at 80 mph, with the driver going through red lights at Fourth, Sixth and Seventh streets.

—Westbound on Seventh Street, logged at 70 mph.

—Suspect tried to run an eastbound Ontario police unit off the road by swerving back and forth into its path near Mountain Avenue.

—Suspect hit curb twice before his vehicle ran red light at Mountain Avenue, and stop sign at Benson Avenue.

—Swerved southbound onto Benson Avenue and ran six stop signs before turning eastbound onto Holt Avenue.

—Speeds averaged between 80 to 100 mph eastbound on Holt Avenue.

—Suspect tried to run sheriff's unit off the road near 700 block of West Holt Avenue.

—Ran red light at san Antonio Avenue, and tried to run an Ontario police unit off the road near Vine Street.

—After running several red lights, suspect drove eastbound onto the San Bernardino Freeway.

—Suspect tried to enter an on-ramp of the DeVore Freeway, as an Ontario police unit pulled up beside him.

—Suspect braked his car, and his wheels locked as he was going 100 mph. The pursuing police unit also braked, locking the wheels, and the front of the unit hit the left rear of the other car.

The chase ended as the driver pilled his car over to the dirt area of the Etiwanda Avenue overpass.

McClements was taken to Doctors Hospital for tests for drunken driving.

Russ unveil new five-year plan; little for people

Growth rates lower

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet government, striking a theme of quality and efficiency, unveiled on Saturday a spartan economic plan for the next five years that offers little encouragement for consumers.

The official Tass news agency announced the outline of the 1976-80 economic plan showing lower growth rates in virtually every significant index, including industrial and agricultural production.

It would give Soviet workers wage increases of 14 to 18 per cent by 1980, raising the average monthly pay from 140 rubles per month to 170. Tass said collective farmers' incomes would increase by an average of 24 to 27 per cent. At the official rate of exchange, one ruble is worth about $1.40.

Promises to ease shortages in the marketplace and the plight of Soviet consumers who have had a taste of Western goods is made at the start of every five-year economic period. But the growth rates targeted for this year make it clear that the leadership is asking the public to tighten its belt.

"The main task of the 10th five-year plan consists of implementing the Communist party's course for raising the material and cultural standards of the people on the basis of dynamic and well-balanced development of social production and raising its efficiency," Tass said. It calls for "accelerating scientific technical progress, higher labor productivity and an allout effort to improve quality of work at all levels of the national economy."

Soviet planners are shooting for a growth rate in consumer industry over the next half-decade of 30-32 per cent. That is 35 per cent below the growth goal set for the the ninth five-year plan back in 1970.

Heavy industry, which gets five times more attention and investment than light industry in Russia, is listed to grow 35-39 per cent.

As Schlesinger sees it

Disintegration of Western Europe is the goal of Soviet

PARIS (AP) — James Schlesinger, former U.S. defense secretary, said in an interview published Saturday that he believes Moscow's goal is the disintegration of Western Europe and the extension of Soviet influence to the Atlantic coast of France.

Schlesinger told the magazine Le Point, "In my view, they (the Russians) have potentially offensive aims. By modifying the balance of forces on the continent and achieving an unquestionable military preponderance, they expect to deprive the forces of the Western allies of all credibility. I think they hope thereby to provoke the ultimate desintegration of Western Europe.

"In other words, they want to establish their hegemony, without fighting, from Brest Litovsk to Brest."

Brest Litovsk is on the Polish-Russian border. Brest is France's main naval base and is at the western tip of the Brittany Peninsula.

Federal probe shows restaurants unclean

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal inspections of restaurants in nine cities found 90 per cent to be unsanitary, the General Accounting Office reported Saturday.

"The sanitation of many of the nation's restaurants is unacceptable and needs to be improved," the GAO said in a report that called for a greater federal role in regulating restaurants.

The statistical sample of restaurants in the nine cities found 90 per cent with inadequate sanitation, 4 per cent marginal, 4 per cent acceptable and 2 per cent excellent, the report said.

Among the unsanitary conditions found were roaches crawling on bread and food-contact surfaces, rat and cockroach infestations, beetles in food, fresh bread stored on top of a dirty garbage can and mouse droppings on shelves.

"Local governments, which have assumed primary responsibility for regulating restaurants, have generally not aggressively enforced local sanitation ordinances and regulations to insure that restaurant operators follow good sanitation practices," the GAO said.

Reagan hits big government spending in speech in South

HOUSTON (AP) — Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan charged here Saturday that the Democrats are suffering from "political schizophrenia and that the American people are tired of ever-increasing federal spending and are ready for "responsible Republicanism."

Reagan, the only announced GOP presidential candidate to oppose President Ford for the nomination, appeared at the Southern Republican Conference here and was loudly applauded by a responsive audience.

The conference is a meeting of GOP leaders from 13 Southern states. Many of the delegates said in interviews during the two-day meeting that the Southern Republicans are leaning increasingly toward Reagan for the GOP nomination.

Reagan's remarks were contained in excerpts of his speech released in advance.

Reagan laid out a program that called for a stronger American defense position, continued U.S. stewardship of the Panama Canal, recognition of the noncommunist regime in Angola, and continued restrictions in relations with Cuba. He also called for a balanced federal budget and a return to the states of many of the governmental functions now performed in Washington.

The former California governor hit hardest, however at the increasing federal spending.

"I am confident that the American people are ready to demand that the federal government gets its weight off their backs and its fingers out of their pockets and purses," he said. "Today more than two-thirds of our people — Republicans, independents and Democrats alike — are convinced they are not getting their money's worth from the government."

Reagan attributed excessive government spending to "doctrinaire liberalism," which he said can find a solution for problems only by increasing the federal bureaucracy while at the same time deploring the increasing size of government.

Reagan said that the American people are ready to demand a balanced federal budget to end cycles of inflation and recession.

"When it comes to the argument over whether we should have a Republican $60 billion deficit or a Democratic $80 billion deficit, I find there is no room for me on either side," he said. "Our goal must be a balanced budget."

Robbed in home by three hoodlums

Couple, 104, blind and afraid

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — John James is blind; his wife, Amanda, has only partial sight; and both are 104 years old. Three robbers broke into their home and took money they could have used for rent.

Police said a neighborhood youth and two other persons brushed past Mrs. James when she opened the door one night last week. The youth took money from her purse and a companion knocked her to the ground. They left with $50.52.

"First time it's happened in 45 years we've been here," said James. "That's 45 years here in this house. We pay rent, don't own it. It's $43 a month.

"Course, I've been rolled on the street," he continued in an interview. "That's been a couple years ago, wasn't it dear? Man ran up behind me, put his hand in my pocket and got every dollar I had."

James and his wife sat on a sofa in the living room of their cramped rowhouse in south Philadelphia as they talked about the robbery. The cracked and stained wallpaper was illuminated by a single, bare light bulb in a gooseneck lamp.

James said he had worked as a "general utility houseman — that's a butler, an all-around man ... When did I retire? Merciful God, I can't count the years."

James said he and his wife live now on government checks and three times a week "the city brings a hot meal."

"I just thank God for anything, whatever I can get," he said.

"Afraid, oh yes, especially since this happened," he said. "The city is trying to get us a place, a three-room apartment, but I told them I wouldn't take this wife or any wife among the hoodlums and slums. Now this neighborhood got bad. Lord have mercy."

James said neither he nor his wife has been out of the house for years, with the exception of trips to Wills Eye Hospital.

"They tell us they can't do nothing, nothing," he said.

"I listen to the radio, especially the spirituals and churches. I love that. She does too," James said.

"God, oh yes. If it weren't for God I don't know what," he said. "We've been blessed, my dear and me. We've come a long ways. A man, woman or child don't believe in God is a pretty poor creature."

Usually, James said, they look forward to "nothing in particular, but God."

Recipe contest opens up a can of worms

WORMY CAKE

Patricia M. Howell, in her West St. Paul, Minn., kitchen, talks about winning $500 in a cooking contest with her recipe for "Surprise Applesauce Cake." The surprise is the earthworms she threw in to spice the cake. The contest was sponsored by North American Bait Farms of Ontario which sells earthworms.

POMONA, Calif. (AP) — "Sort of tastes like a rubber band," said one judge.

"A bit like cavia, oily, the same texture," observed a second judge.

And that was jus about the nicest thing saidall day at the final competition of the first known earthworm recipe contest in the United States.

Some proclaimed it the firstever earthworm recipe competition, ANYWHERE, but there have been people smacking their lips over a nice juicy worm since prehistoric man outgrew primitive vegetables.

There was litle lip smacking at Thursday's competition in the dining room at Californi State Polytechnic University.

And a pre-judging announcement that a dried earthworm is 70 per cent pure protein didnt seem particularly reassuring to the four judges — with the possible exception of Dr. Ronald Taylor, author of "Butterflies n My Stomach." The bok extolls the food gains that could be made by a hungry world if only mor people could be induced t eat insects. Just two weks ago, Taylor ate cricke bread and a mealworm canape on the Mike Douglas television show.

Judge Ron Gadds, president of the North American Bait (earthworm) Farms, barely picked at an eathworm souffle and announced firmly that the delicacy didn't taste too god.

Dean Sander, radio station KLAC's news director and the judge who said the creatures taste like "rubber bands," confided: "Some things should be done only in the privacy of one's home, and tasting worm recipes is one of them."

Judge Ruth Davis, an associate professor of nutrition who tasted some resemblance to caviar, gratefully sipped a glass of water after sampling the dishes and announced, "That really tastes good."

The winner?

Patricia Howell of St. Paul, Minn., for an applesauce cake recipe, spiced by dried earthworms, chopped coarsely and then beaten into the applesauce and egg batter.

The cake was mixed and baked here. Only the recipe came from the St. Paul inventor, who later told a reporter in a telephone interview that she had never baked such a cake, much less tasted one. She claimed that was because she had not been able to find any earthworms during Minnesota's bitter cold winter.

Frank Carnody of North America Bait Farms which sponsored the contest said the cake had won $500 first prize money for Mrs. Howell.

The applesauce 'n' worms recipe won over more than 200 entrants, including french-fried worms, an "earthworm supreme patty," and a fresh-chopped raw earthworm cocktail served like shrimp with a hot sauce.

Landslide victory

Australian labor ripped apart

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — A conservative coalition led by Malcolm Fraser gained one of the biggest landslide victories in the history of Australian politics Saturday. The results threw Gough Whitlam's Labor party into disarray and guaranteed three years of practically unchallenged conservative power.

Computer projections based on 40 per cent of the vote predicted that the Liberal-National Country coalition could wind up with 90 of the 127 seats in the House of Representatives, with the Labor party salvaging the rest. In the last House, Labor had a 65-61 margin with one independent. In the Senate the margin was expected to be similar.

The voters' verdict appeared to be a massive swing against the series of sudden social reforms Labor has made since coming to power.

"They ripped the guts out of us," said Bob Hawke, president of the Labor party and head of the Australian Council of Trade Unions.

Noting fears that labor unions would launch widespread strikes to protest the outcome of the vote, Hawke pleaded with trade unionists to remain calm and accept the eight million voters' decision.

Whitlam, 59, said in Canberra there were "some very serious implications for Australian democracy" in the demise of the Labor government and the rise of Fraser as the new prime minister.

The Labor leader refused to confirm he would remain leader of his decimated party.

Labor ruled Australia for almost three years until Nov. 11, when Fraser refused to pass the government's 1975-76 budget in the opposition-controlled Senate. The move was unprecedented — an unscrupulous break with parliamentary tradition, Whitlam said. The decision by Queen Elizabeth II's representative in Australia to fire Whitlam Nov. 11 was equally without precedent.

Fraser, without a majority in the House of Representatives, became caretaker prime minister after Whitlam was dumped.

Fraser, 45, told reporters at the Melbourne hotel where he watched the election returns that he took the vote results with "humility."

"A great deal of responsibility has been placed on us for the tremendous task of rebuilding and looking forward to the future, creating an Australia, a government that will govern for all the people," he said.

Conservatives also ousted a Labor government in New Zealand in elections Nov. 29. The National party returned to power on the strength of New Zealand's sharpest political swing in 40 years.

In Canada's far western province of British Columbia, the proprivate enterprise Social Credit party ran up an impressive election victory Thursday over the Socialist New Democratic party, which had been in power for 3½ years.

Fraser promised to control wage demands by powerful leftist unions, balance the national budget and forge even closer ties between Australia and its traditional allies, the United States and Britain.

He said he would retain the "essential" parts of Labor's social reforms, including national health insurance. He is likely to move away, however, from Labor's interest in improving relations with Communist and Third World countries.

Hawke, joining an election night television discussion panel, said, "This decimation has seen the defeat of outstanding young blokes who came in (to Parliament) in 1972 and 1974." But despite the thinning in Labor's ranks, he said, "I'm optimistic that if we rally around together ... we can come back in three years."

At least three ministers in the former Labor government, Defense Minister Bill Morrison, Atty. Gen. Kep Enderby and Housing and Construction Minister Joseph Riordan, were in danger of losing their seats in Parliament.

Because of a complicated system of preferential selection used in computing Senate votes, the final tally in the upper house may not be known for a month. In the last Senate, which Fraser used to block Whitlam's budget, there were 30 members from the coalition of the Liberal and National Country parties, 27 Labor men and three independents.

Hold the spinach

School lunches go down the drain

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — When school lunch trays come back heaped with leftovers, what's the only thing missing? The chocolate cake.

Whether free or sold at 50 cents a meal, a survey of Des Moines city schools conducted by the Des Moines Tribune found about 25 per cent of the food in federally funded lunch programs is scraped down the drain.

"I'm sure parents would be shocked at the waste," said Sharlene Norem, a cafeteria worker at Lincoln High School. "You get used to it, though. You know what is going to come back."

Among the things that come back uneaten are most vegetables, fruits and salads. Cabbage, broccoli and spinach lead the list, the newspaper survey found. At one elementary school, 10 gallons of milk were poured down the drain following a single lunch hour.

School menu planners know what pupils like, but often must load their trays with food they won't eat.

"We can't keep serving them pizza and tacos day after day," said Bernice Scheel, cafeteria manager at Garton Elementary School.

And federal nutrition standards require that school lunches be laced with Vitamin C, which accounts for the hated cabbage, broccoli and spinach.

"I get free lunch but it's seldom that I eat here, maybe once or twice a week," Ellison Crawford, 16, a sophomore at Technical High School, said as she picked at her lunch tray.

"Today, I'll eat my mashed potatoes and ice cream bar and throw away the rest."

Her leftovers included two cartons of chocolate milk, turkey, bread, tossed salad and cranberry sauce.

"I think a lot of the problem is that kids have just what they want to eat at home," Mrs. Scheel said. "If they won't eat something at home, they won't eat it here.

"They've made up their minds what they're going to eat before they even pick up the tray. It's a lot of expense and a lot of work — just going down the drain."

Why not let pupils refuse food they won't eat?

Janice Dudley, the city schools director of food service, says learning to eat is a school activity.

"We need to introduce new foods and show the importance of balanced meals," she explained. "School years are the time students form their eating patterns for the rest of their lives."

Put on the heat—go to the people, says Reagan

NEW YORK (AP) — Republican presidential candidate Ronald Reagan says the last leader the American public had a good deal of faith in was Franklin D. Roosevelt because "he took his case to the people."

Reagan brought up the the late Democratic president in a discussion with CBS newsman Mike Wallace about American disillusionment with politics. The interview will be broadcast on the network's 60 Minutes program Sunday.

"The greatest leader is not necessarily the one who does the greatest things," Reagan said. "He is the one that gets the people to do the greatest things. And that's what is lacking now."

He said that when Roosevelt was getting the New Deal started and faced a balky Congress, "He went over their heads with the fireside chat. They were the most popular programs on radio."

"He took his case to the people," Reagan said. "And he enlightened the people. And the people made the Congress feel the heat. It isn't necessary to enlighten Congress just put on the heat," he said.

The former California governor said the reason more pople are staying home from the pls now than ever before "is they have a feeling that government is now so beyond them that they cannot influence it."

Reagan was interviewed with his wife, Nancy, at home on heir 640-acre ranch in the mountains above Santa Barbara, Calif. Mr. Reagan was asked about several isues First Lady Betty Ford has commented on.

Wallace recalled Mrs. Ford's comment on how she would handle the situation if her daughter came and told her she was having araffair. "I don't think I would haveanswered the question," said Mrs. Reagan.

On another subject, she said she favored the death penalty because I think it saves lives. I thinkthat there are people alive today because of the death penalty."

On abortion, she said, " can't get over the point of it being hat you're killing somebody. I can't get beyond that."

She agreed that marijuana "unfortunately" seems to be a fact of life but added she "would not be in favor of legalizing it."

Sites where bodies found draws the curious

FLORENCE, S.C. (AP) — The site where the first bodies were found now draws the curious. Cars creep past the shallow gravesites as people eye the scene.

Eight bodies have been dug up in the fields and woods near here in the last two weeks. Some residents complain that the cars of the curious block their driveways. Others express different concerns.

"It's a nice community," said one resident. "It's too bad that people will remember us because of something like this. The whole community is upset over it."

For weeks authorities searched the flat, often swampy countryside in Florence and nearby Williamsburg counties. They had heard rumors of missing persons from he North Charleston area, but they lug 40, 50, 60 holes near this city of 30,000 in the heart of South Carolina' tobacco belt. They found nothing.

They got their break with the discovery of clothing belonging to a missing 13-year-old grl, Kim Ghelkin. The discovery led them to charge Donald H. "Pee Wee" Gaskins with contributig to the delinquency of a minor.

After Gaskins' arres, an informer identified as Walter Leroy Neely, took officers on Dec. 4 to a wooded area near a corn field about a mile off South Carolina 341.

Deputy Glen Ard began to dig, and just a few feet down he struck something. By dark, police had uncovered three bodies in graves three to five feet deep.

Three more bodies were discovered the next day.

On Saturday, Dec. 6, one of the bodies was identified as that of Johnny Sellers, 38. A man identified as James K. Judy, 23, was charged with murder in Sellers' death.

Authorities said they were questioning Gaskins, who lived in the area where the bodies were found near the Prospect community, in the slayings.

The following Monday, two more of the six bodies were identified as those of Dennis Bellamy, 28, and his half-brother, John Henry Knight, 15.

Gaskins and Neely were charged with murder in the deaths of Sellers, Knight and Bellamy, who was Neely's brother-in-law.

That same day an unidentified hunter stumbled across a skull about a mile from where the first bodies were found. It belonged to a 20-year-old woman. The next day the body of a child about four years old was found at the location.

The last two bodies remain unidentified, but authorities now confirm that the two women whose bodies were found at the first site were the wives of the accused men — Diane Bellamy Neely, Neely's wife and the sister of one of the identified victims, and Jessie Judy, wife of James Judy.

The sixth body in the first burial site, that of a man, was believed to be Avery Howard, who had been dating Mrs. Neely, according to sources close to the investigation.

A spokesman for the State Law Enforcement Division said the victims appeared to have been carried to burial site alive and then executed they stood in their own graves. C of the women was naked from waist down, and a pair of panties slacks had been tossed on top of h Autopsies revealed the victims been shot or stabbed or both.

Residents of the tiny, norma quiet community said they w shocked by the slayings and bur so close to them.

"I just can't understand how a this could have happened with anybody seeing it," said a wo sitting at the roadside near the bu site. "I just can't believe it."

NEW COAT FOR OLD PAINT

They'll make children's Christmas a little nicer

Five volunteer women restore toys

By PHYLLIS CANNON
PB Staff Writer

Christmas morning will ring with the happy laughter and shouts of 1,000 boys and girls largely because of the efforts of five volunteer women.

They work under the nom de plume of Santa Claus, Inc., from a toy center on the Pomona Mall. They have had assistance from various groups and donations from a number of merchants, but this week, when parents pick out toys for their children, they'll end a year's steady work.

Their sole reward will be the satisfaction of knowing that 1,000 boys and girls will play through a happy Christmas day with their toys.

The toy center where these women have spent their time this past year serves needy families in Pomona, Walnut, Claremont, Chino and Diamond Bar. The 1,000 boys and girls represent 300 families.

Of this total, 160 families with 664 children are in Pomona. Twenty-four families with 93 children are Vietnamese refugee families.

The women in Santa Claus, Inc., are president Ella Bockover, her daughter, Ula Smith, Mrs. Smith's neighbor, Barbara Ensminger and Judy Spilleano, all of Pomona, and Donna Whittingslow, who drives in from Charter Oak.

They have scheduled parents to visit the toy center Wednesday and Thursday to make their selections.

Toys, dolls and games to be given to the families were donated by residents then renewed by the volunteers.

They have repaired, rebuilt, repainted and in some instances, completely built toys from parts.

"We have worked hard," said Mrs. Bockover, "but we have had wonderful help. Women in the sewing circle at the First Presbyterian Church in Pomona dressed 65 dolls for us. Women at Claremont Village Green dressed 15."

The Fashion Inn in La Verne donated $150 worth of material for dresses. Additional material came in from Expres-Sew Fabrics in Claremont and Lucille's Yardage in Claremont.

"We never quit," said Mrs. Bockover. "We work year round. Usually we try to take a little break in January, but we won't get to do that this year."

Next month, the volunteers will have to pack all their leftover items, their paints, work benches and repair materials and move.

"We have to be out of this building by Feb. 1," said Mrs. Bockover. "We'll need another place right away, so we can begin work for next year."

The volunteers need a large space, a vacant store is adequate, on a donated basis. "We pay our own utilities," said Mrs. Bockover.

They also need more volunteers. "We would love to have some of the older men and women join us. It's really satisfying to repair and rebuild these toys and repaint them. And it's fun, for women who like to sew, to dress the dolls."

They also need items that would be appropriate gifts for boys and girls, ages 12, 13 and 14.

"They like transistor radios. The girls like cosmetics, combs and brushes, purses, jewelry and knee sox," Mrs. Bockover said.

They can use parts from bicycles, wagons, skooters and other wheel toys, along with whole toys residents wish to donate.

Mrs. Bockover said Santa Claus, Inc., will hold a public meeting in January to elect new officers and get orgainzed for Christmas 1976.

Cranston critical:

Past oil lease sales failure

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's sale of oil leases off Southern California was a failure that should lead the Ford administration to review its policy on offshore oil development, Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., says.

"I am asking the Interior Department for an explanation for the apparent disparity between their presale estimate and the actual bids received," Cranston said in a letter to Interior Secretary Thomas S. Kleppe. A copy of the letter was obtained Saturday.

Advance government estimates of the bidding ranged up to $3 billion. But the total in Thursday's bidding was only $438 million.

Cranston called the total "very disappointing."

"The oil industry estimated that there are about 14 billion barrels of oil and 28 trillion cubic feet of gas in the fields off Southern California. At today's prices that amounts to about $210 billion.

"Clearly, a bonus bid of $438 million for such a huge treasure of oil and gas is ludicrously low," Cranston said.

Although Cranston did not explicitly call for rejection of the bids, the department has that authority. The department is expected to announce this week which bids it will accept.

Thursday's bidding on the 1.26 million acres off Southern California was the most controversial sale of offshore oil and gas leases in U.S. history. It came after years of preliminary work and a spate of lawsuits.

Previously, all federal offshore leases were in the Gulf of Mexico except one in the Santa Barbara Channel in 1968. A year later, the major oil spill there gave impetus to the environmental movement and the series of lawsuits seeking to halt off-shore drilling.

Environmentalists and California governmental units fought the new leasing in courts in California and Washington. They are continuing their suit in U.S. District Court in Washington despite their failure to win a preliminary injunction to stop the leasing.

The Southern California sales marked the opening of a new stage of offshore oil development, with the government planning to sell leases on 20 million to 30 million offshore acres in the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

Honda hikes U.S. prices

TOKYO (AP) — Honda Motor Co. said today its U.S. subsidiary, American Honda Motor Co., has raised its suggested retail prices of passenger cars by an average 3 per cent.

Officials said the price increase, effective with Honda's 1976 model year vehicles, was decided upon due to an improvement in the new models' drivability.

The price of the 1,500 cubic centimeter-engine, two-door "civic" passenger model rose to $2,979 from $2,879, officials said.

In the general presidential election there is a $20-million spending limit for each candidate.

Low-pressure storage tests

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Dr. Max E. Patterson, Washington State University horticulturist, is among scientists at the school developing low-pressure storage which may, within a few years, extend the purchase life of many varieties of fresh produce nearly the year around.

In many ways low-pressure storage is a refinement of controlled-atmosphere storage which now makes possible purchase of fresh apples the year around, although the crop is harvested in late summer or early fall.

Controlled - atmosphere storage combines temperatures slightly above freezing with an atmosphere of 1 to 4 per cent oxygen (ambient air contains about 20 per cent) to slow the "respiration" and therefore aging of apples.

Low-pressure storage adds a third factor, reduced air pressure. The lower pressure allows release of naturally occurring hormonal gas.

Christmas busy time of year for shoplifters

By SETH MYDANS
Associated Press Writer

Thirty teen-age girls invade a New York City department store, bowl over a security guard and dash out again carrying more than $10,000 worth of leather and suede coats. All but two get away.

A Florida matron in a maxidress gracefully, if somewhat slowly, walks out a department store doorway with a 19-inch color television set between her legs.

A Washington, D.C., man steals $26 worth of cosmetics for his girlfriend from a department store and loses his $30,000-a-year job as the store's security director.

A shoplifter is arrested in Raleigh, N.C., carrying a notebook which police say has the names and clothing sizes of Mayor and Mrs. Clarence Lightner.

A 46-year-old Portland, Ore., man eats a cream horn pastry, an eclair and some Swiss cheese at a delicatessen and walks out, then argues in court that he can't be charged with shiplifting because he carried nothing away. (The judge convicts him, saying, "He carried it away in his stomach.")

These shoplifters and four million more like them, who are caught each year, steal millions of dollars worth of goods, the U.S. Commerce Department says. Neither the Commerce Department nor the FBI knows how many shoplifters there are, but they have estimates.

The Commerce Department says that for every shoplifter caught, 35 others get away, and that the total number of shoplifting incidents might therefore be as high as 140 million a year, with $2 billion to $5 billion worth of goods stolen.

The FBI guesses that each shoplifter makes off with an average of $35 worth of merchandise — from nickel candy bars to fur coats and gems.

Christmas time is the busy season for shoplifters, when stores do 30 per cent of their annual business and many people find themselves stealing a little something, as one security officer put it, "after resisting the urge all year."

Stores across the country spend $4 billion a year for guards and security systems, a Commerce Department official says.

A just-completed Cornell University study shows that the loss to stores ranges from 2 to 3 per cent of total sales, sometimes close to total profit margins. In urban ghettos the losses can climb as high as 10 per cent, and they are increasingly cited as a significant factor in some branch closings and corporate bankruptcies.

The FBI calls shopiifting "the fastest-growing larceny in the country," up 23 per cent since 1973.

From 1960 to 1973 it rose 221 per cent, according to the National Council on Crime and Delinquency.

Seventy-seven of 100 students questioned in a survey at the University of Massachusetts said they had shoplifted, and almost half of those said they did it regularly.

In a study of one New York City store, 500 random shoppers were followed, and one out of 12 of them stole something.

Though thousands of people steal something every day, there is no accepted profile of the typical shoplifter.

Some studies single out women, who make up a large part of the nation's shoppers. Teenagers also are blamed.

But the shoplifter can be anyone from the old woman without enough food stamps to the Houston professionals known as "rounders" because they make the rounds of the stores.

It can be school children described by one policeman as "roaming and plundering like a Roman legion," and it can be the wife of a wealthy Arab caught with her children stuffing expensive clothing into shopping bags.

Though they are not in the majority, drug addicts take a large toll. "They lift heavy and they use fear," a Honolulu police captain says. "They know a woman clerk isn't going to stop them." One Honolulu addict told of needing $500 a day in stolen goods to keep herself and her husband in drugs.

Shoplifters do get caught. Shoplifting is dumb.

RETAILERS FIGHT BACK — This poster is the spearhead of one of the nation's strongest anti-shoplifting campaigns now underway in Washington, D.C. Merchants are spending $38,000 on an intensive campaign in the Washington area to spotlight the dangers of shoplifting.

Shoplifters...

"It used to be mostly poor people," said Boston police detective Bernard Hughes, talking about the spreading problem. "Now we get doctors, lawyers, teachers, nuns, priests, ministers, rabbis, you name it."

And they are becoming more audiacious. Some even try to get refunds for goods they've stolen, Hughes said.

And shoplifting spreads out of the stores into hospitals, airplanes and hotels.

With another Christmas season under way, stores across the nation have hired armed guards, have chained down merchandise, and have put into use microwave detectors, infrared telescopes, silent alarms, television cameras and two-way dressing room mirrors.

A number of cities and states are mounting publicity campaigns against shoplifting, instituting courses for school children and store employes, and tightening laws and courtroom procedures.

Almost everybody has a theory on why people shoplift.

"The problem with shoplifting is, a lot of people don't feel it's a crime, or they feel that they are stealing from a nonentity ... not from a person," says an official of the Commerce Department.

"People that wouldn't have dreamed of doing it five or six years ago find themselves unemployed and they will resort to shoplifting if necessary, just to feed their families," says Bill McBrayer, president of the Georgia Retail Assn.

"Rich people shoplift just as much as poor people," says Valery Hartman, a security officer at Carson's store in Wimette, Ill. "Some people feel they have spent so much here they expect a bonus."

Authorities say many young shoplifters succumb to peer pressure. In Georgia, for example, some high school clubs require shoplifting as an initation rite. An Ohio college sorority once made it a pledge requirement.

Thomas Haynes, chairman of the Metropolitan Washington, D.C., Board of Trade, says shoplifters who are caught usually give these reasons: "Trying to get away with something for nothing," "No one was looking," "Looking for kicks," or "Looking for excitement or a challenge."

Barnard's analysis is terse: "A dire picture of a very sick society."

A child recognizes self-image

BALTIMORE (AP) — A normal child does not begin to develop a self-image until the age of 10 or 11 months and does not recognize a definite self-image in a mirror until the age of 2 to 5 years, a University of Maryland professor says.

Dr. Taghi Modarressi said his study is the first to produce clinical evidence delineating the various stages a child goes through in developing a self-image. Modarressi is the director of training in child and adolescent psychiatry at the university's Institute of Psychiatry and Human Behavior.

The study, performed with children aged 2 months to 8 years, was designed to find a definite point of self-recognition. Modarressi said his research involved exposing the child to his reflection in both a true mirror and then one that was convexly distorted.

Modarressi said children from 9 to 10 months old were highly responsive to both the true and distorted mirror images. Their excitement, attention and activity seemed to be unaffected by the distortion.

Slightly older children, aged 10 to 11 months, made rhythmic circular movements when exposed to their distorted image as though attempting to correct the distortion. This change in response indicated the child may have some idea of his image and perhaps recognizes the distorted image is wrong, Modarressi said.

A marked change in response occurred when a child reached 18 to 22 months of age, he said. The child avoids both images, having begun to develop a selfimage which does not match the mirror image.

From 2 to 5 years, the child has developed a definite selfimage which is recognizable in the mirror since the child literally flees the distorted image, the researcher said.

Hang friends' photos on Christmas tree

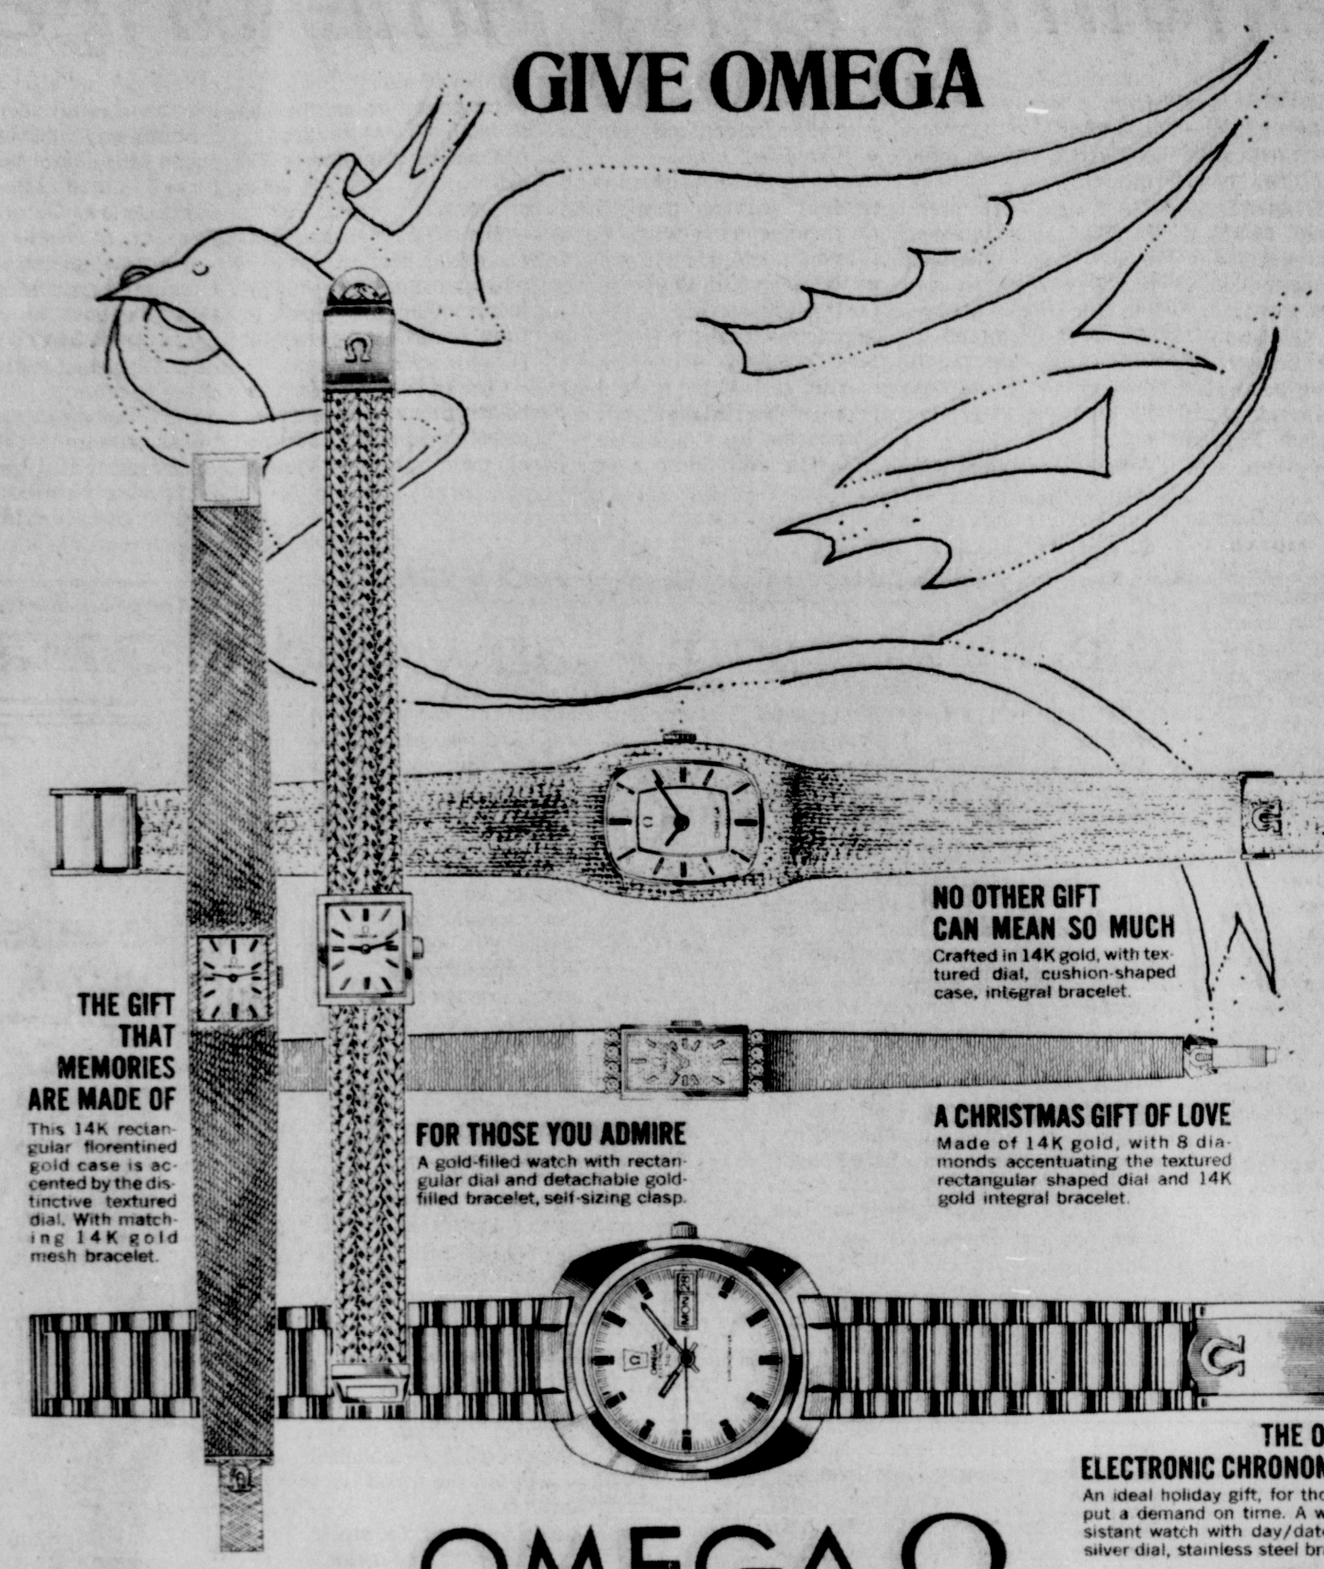
NEW YORK (AP) — Make your friends and loved ones a part of your Christmas tree decor by using jar caps and snapshots you already have.

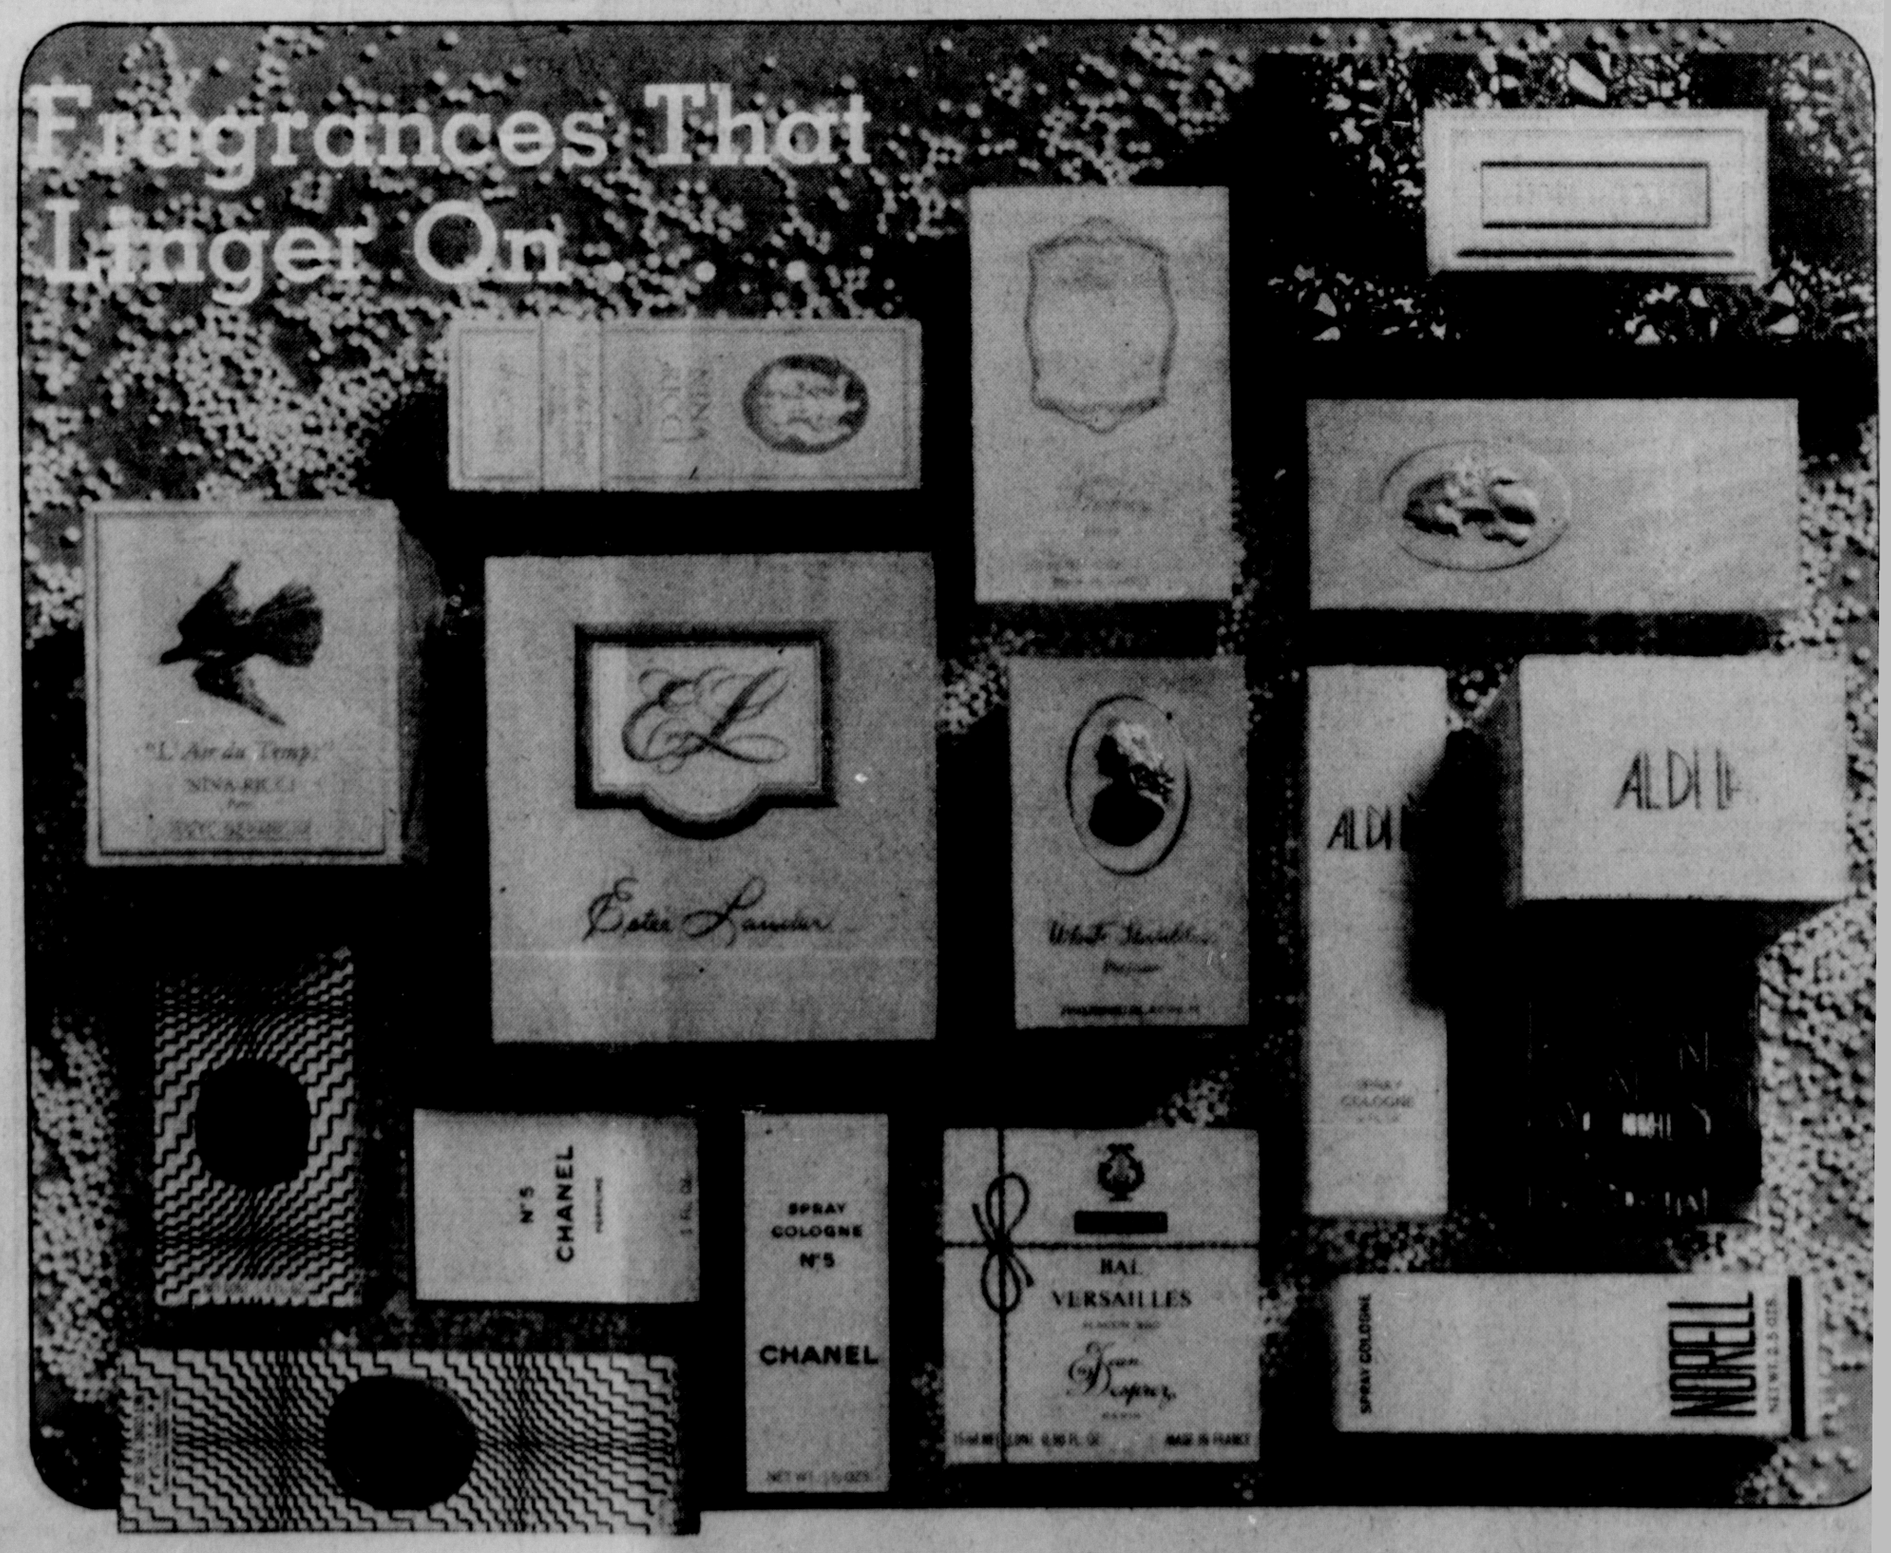
Simply trace jar cap onto photos and cut out the circle. Press picture inside cap. Glue ribbon to the inside and outside edges of the cap, leaving enough over on the outside to form a loop for hanging.

Everybody will love to see his or her picture as part of your Christmas display. It's a warm holiday touch.

These frames can be turned into inexpensive gifts by simply gluing three of the units described above on a foot-long piece of matching ribbon. Eliminate the individual hanging loops. Hang the threesome vertically on the wall with a shiny brass tack.

Besides costing almost nothing to make, decorating your Christmas tree as a "tree of friendship" helps the ecology by reusing things ordinarily thrown away.





Lifestyle of early Hollywood

By DAVID READER
PB Correspondent

GABLE & LOMBARD & POWELL & HARLOW. By Joe Morella and Edward Z. Epstein. Dell Books. $1.50.

Authors Morella and Epstein, who have previously delved into the lives of Lucille Ball, Judy Garland, and Lana Turner, now focus their attention on the personal and public side of four of the biggest film stars from Hollywood's "Golden Age."

The lives of the four were interwoven with one another. Both Clark Gable and William Powell were husbands of Carole Lombard; Gable and Harlow were co-stars in a number of MGM films and close friends; Powell and Harlow were engaged to be married when the latter died from uremic poisoning in 1973.

Their stories make very interesting reading. Although the romance between Gable and Lombard, and the life of Jean Harlow have been chronicled before by several authors, Morella and Epstein dig deeply into the personal aspects of their relationships among themselves and with others.

Gable's two marriages prior to Lombard were to women older than he, women, the authors assert, who could give the ambitious Gable a big helping hand with his career.

Lombard, the gifted actress of many "screwball comedies," became the perfect match for him. She was fun-loving, fond of playing practical jokes, and possessed a vocabulary that would delight many a man's locker room. After their marriage, she and Gable shied away from the limelight when not working at the studio, content with one another. They attempted to make a go at ranching in Encino, and went on frequent hunting trips together.

When Lombard died in a plane crash in 1942 (she was on her way home from a War Bond rally in Indiana), Gable became despondent, leaving much of their home as it was before her death. He enlisted in the army for the duration of World War II. He married twice after his return, but only in the last one did he find the type of stability he had had with Lombard.

Harlow was the symbol of glamorous sex in the 1930s, led for the most part a life that had tragic overtones.

Her beauty eventually made her a top movie star, but a great deal of her earnings went to supporting her mother and "nonworking" stepfather. None of Harlow's three marriages worked out, and just when her life was receiving a better turn with her engagement to Powell, she died at twenty-six.

What space is allotted to Powell, perhaps the finest performer of the quartet, is seemingly done as an afterthought in order to round the book out. He was close to both Lombard and Harlow, husband to one and almost-husband to the other, and his part in their lives is important.

But for the most part, Epstein and Morella bring the personalities of their subjects to the forefront in a vivid portrait of life in the film colony.

U.S. missionaries played role in shaping Arab world

PIONEERS IN THE ARAB WORLD, by Dorothy F. Van Ess. Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Co., Grand Rapids, Mich. Paperback $3.95.

By JOSEPH H. FIRMAN
PB Staff Writer

To put my cards on the table, let me start by saying that the late Dorothy Van Ess was my father's sister — her maiden name was Firman — so you may make what allowances you will for the tenor of this review.

A large part of the book is taken up by her husband, John Van Ess, an early pioneer to Arabia, missionary, scholar, diplomat, and a rare human being. He married me to my wife, Catharine, and we named our son John Van Ess Firman. So much for literary bias.

"Pioneers in the Arab World" recounts the adventures of a small group of American missionaries from the Reformed Caurch of America who ventured into the Middle East at the turn of the century — before there was an Iran or Iraq — and set up schools, taught hygiene, language, literature and mathematics, worked for the betterment of the poor and the liberation of women, and spread the word of Christianity.

John Van Ess was asked once by an inquiry journislist, "How many Muslims have you converted to Christianity during your 40 years here?" Replied Van Ess, "Allah only knows!"

The Arab Mission of the Reformed Church was established in 1889 at Basra in the Turkish province which later became Iraq; at Bahrain, an island in the Persina Gulf, and at Muscat, in the Sultanate of Oman.

The Van Esses were assigned to Basra, and it was from this vantage point that Mrs. Van Ess observed and recorded missionary life from the last days of the Ottoman Empire through two world wars and the Iraqui Revolution of 1958.

Life amid the trackless deserts and marshlands of the nebulous "Arabia" was hard and dangerous in the early years of this century. The missionaries — doctors, clergymen, nurses, teachers — were as much pioneers as the men and women who won the American West.

"The powers of darkness," writes Mrs. Van Ess, "sensing an invasion, smote the invaders in body, soul and mind — in body with sickness, in soul with temptation, in mind with doubt. But steadily their numbers grew. The Church at home, fascinated by the spectacle of her sons and daughters attempting the impossible, prayed and gave and encouraged. Stone by stone, brick by brick, schools and hospitals and houses arose. Again and again the enemy struck, sometimes with death. He seemed to prefer the firstborn." (The Van Esses lost their first-born, John Jr., who succumbed to tropical diseases in Basrah in 1943 after a brilliant career at Princeton University. He was 25.) "Yet always, through shimmering noondays and through choking nights, centers of work were established from which went out the missionary effort and influence."

Born of sturdy New England stock, Dorothy Van Ess earned a bachelor's degree at Mt. Holyoke College and a master's degree at Wellesley College. Her prose style is straightforward, honest, insightful and spritely, occasionally inflamed with deep emotion, often graced with poetry, always informed by the deep-rooted tenets of Christianity and an all-embracing love of humanity.

Characteristically — for Mrs. Van Ess assimilated the truths of all religions — "Pioneers in the Arab World" closes with the traditional "Old Age Prayer," used by Sunni and Shiah Muslims from the time of Abd al Qadit al Jilani (1166 A.D.):

"O Lord, may the end of my life be the best of it;

May the closing acts be my best acts,

And make the best of my days the day when I shall meet Thee."

Agatha releases last book

By PHIL THOMAS

CURTAIN. By Agatha Christie. Dodd, Mead. 238 Pages. $7.95.

"I went downstairs sad at heart. I could hardly imagine life without Poirot ..."

Granted the death of that most extraordinary detective Hercule Poirot will leave a wound in the life of Capt. Arthur Hastings, Poirot's Watson. But it also will leave an emptiness in the reading lives of the many fans, and they are legion, who avidly followed the dapper little Belgian sleuth's adventures through more than 30 novels crafted by Agatha Christie.

In "Curtain," Poirot, who debuted in Dame Agatha's first novel, "The Mysterious Affair At Styles," returns to Styles Court to solve his final crime and close the career that began in 1920. Summoned to Styles, once an elegant mansion now a guest house, by Poirot, Hastings is saddened to find his old friend confined to a wheelchair by arthritis and a weak heart. But while the body has failed the mind is as keen as ever, and Hastings is astounded to hear his ailing friend tell him, "I am here to hunt down a murderer."

Although Poirot is not able to get about easily, Hastings can. He acts as Poirot's bloodhound, but a severely hampered one because while Poirot knows who the murderer is he will not tell his name to Hastings. Thus begins one of the most convoluted, yet always logical, murder mysteries to be written by Dame Agatha. Already responsible for several murders, the murderer, Poirot is convinced, plans to strike again at Styles.

Only one Ben, —Jefferson

MAPLEWOOD, N. J. (AP) — Benjamin Franklin served brilliantly as American ambassador to France. Thomas Jefferson, who followed Franklin in the post, was received by the Comte de Vergennes.

"You replace Dr. Franklin?" inquired the French count, as reported by Sid Frank in his "Presidents: Tidbits and Trivia." "No one can replace Franklin," replied Jefferson. "I merely succeed him." This lighthearted book about the 38 presidents was published by Hammond.

William Kunstler: controversial lawyer

He's not seeking fame, just justice

NEW YORK (AP) — A crimson kerchief tied around his neck, Leonard Crow Dog drops by a suite of poster-plastered law offices at a decidedly undistinguished Fifth Avenue address.

The visitor, spiritual adviser of the American Indian Movement, is free on bail on assault charges. He has only recently journeyed from South Dakota to the Center for Constitutional Rights, run by William Moses Kunstler.

"That's why I want to meet with you," he is explaining, "because you understand me. The other lawyers, they don't understand me."

The whorly-maned Kunstler — advocate for such disparate individuals as the late Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., Puerto Rican nationalist Carlos Feliciano, and Jack Scott, who faces indictment in the Patty Hearst case — breaks into a grin, gullying his already angular face.

"The words he said," Kunstler declares, "they are the currency of the business."

For more than a decade, Kunstler has been paid in this currency of gratitude, rather than money. (His income is mostly from lectures and court appointments to defend indigent clients.) He has been the pre - eminent movement lawyer for civil rights activists, antiwar defendants and New Left radicals. Today most of his clients are Indians, urban guerrillas, prison inmates and others who see their enemy as "the system."

Kunstler, who thinks of himself as an itinerant lawyer daring to stand up for freedom in hostile communities, says it's not fame he seeks, but justice.

So does this peripatetic counselor-at-law justify the controversy that floods his life — contempt citations for courtroom pyrotechnics, a stillborn attempt to disbar him, criticism that he is a showboating media junkie, a radical, a revolutionary.

"Outside the movement, they have an ax to grind. Those people don't bother me at all," Kunstler says. "I go by results."

Among "those people" is the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, which brought disciplinary charges against him for a while last year because federal Judge Julius Hoffman gave him a four-year contempt of court sentence at the Chicago Seven conspiracy trial five years ago. Kunstler appealed the sentence successfully.

Unchastened by Hoffman or the bar association, Kunstler keeps courting contempt.

At the Joan Little murder trial in Raleigh, N. C., this year, Kunstler flared, "I'm glad to see the quality of justice in North Carolina has not improved ... Judge, I think what you're doing is outrageous."

In interviews, Kunstler colors himself as a crusading lawyer, poking holes in a tent of political oppression and marshaling his resources — among them, an admittedly large ego — "to be effective for the people I want to help; it helps if people know your name."

Now 56, Kunstler began his career flouting tradition, that of following in the steps of his father and grandfather, both doctors.

He went to public schools here in the city of his birth and then to Yale, where he was a Phi Beta Kappa French major, a swimmer and a writer whose first of about a dozen books was a volume of poetry.

After service as an Army intelligence officer during World War II, he entered Columbia, earned his law degree, became an executive trainee at Macy's and joined his younger brother in a law practice involving divorces, contracts, wills and negligence suits.

He took on a few cases for the American Civil Liberties Union, but hardly anyone had heard of him until the ACLU asked him to help defend the "freedom riders" in the deep South.

"I started to live in 1961," Kunstler recalls of the experience, which led to five years with King, the defense of Stokely Carmichael in a Selma, Ala., civil rights case and representation of the late Adam Clayton Powell in a battle against the Congress.

It was in these years that he was radicalized, although he prefers to think of the period as his liberation.

Given to bearhugs and busses, Kunstler treasures getting involved not only in what he calls the movement but also in the lives of his clients.

For example, black militant H. Rap Brown, now imprisoned for armed robbery, was among several clients married in the spacious old suburban home Kunstler once shared

Personas de este area en anual 'Las Posadas'

Cuando la ceremonia anual de "Las Posadas" se celebre esta noche a las seis y media en la mision San Gabriel, San Gabriel, varias personas de este area formaran parte de su reparto.

El evento describe la busqueda de alojamiento para Jose y Maria. La conmemoracion anual es una tradicion que empezo a la llegada de los primeros espanoles y mejicanos a California.

Mrs. Donald Carpenter de San Dimas representara la Madrina.

Mr. y Mrs. Alphonse B. Fages de Pomona y Mr. y Mrs. William Asendorf de Walnut estaran entre los residentes de la localidad donde la Sagrada Familia rogara que le den albergue. Ambos matrimonios representan Los Compadrinos de San Gabriel, una organizacion dedicada a la preservacion de la tradicion de la mision.

Los Sres. Asendorfs seran los anfitriones a las puertas de la mision. La Sra. Carpenter, como la Madrina, colocara al Nino Jesus en el pesebre del santuario, al tiempo que todos entonaran himnos de gracias.

La procesion con candelabros de Las Posadas se formara a las 6 y media en los terrenos de la Escuela Superior Mision de San Gabriel, Santa Anita Ave. y Broadway. Se invita al publico a que participe y se le facilitaran velas.

A continuacion de la procesion, se celebrara una pinata para los muchachos y a los mayores se les obsequiara con chocolate y pan dulce, todo gratis.

Pomona revisa la sistema para hacer quejas

El Concejo Minicipal de la Ciudad de Pomona reviso una proposicion de procedimientos que facilita a los ciudadanos mayor libertad para recurrir supuestas irregularidades de los empleados municipales.

Aunque no se voto la proposicion, parece bien recibida por el Concejo, quemando sea revisada por varios grupos de los empleados de los diferentes departamentos y por la Comision de Sistemas de Meritos para su revision y comentarios.

La proposicion, si fuera aprobada, permitira a los ciudadanos apelar a la Comision de Sistema de Meritos si estimaran que su reclamacion no ha sido debidamente atendida por el departamento correspondiente.

La practica acutal es que si un ciudadano protesta lo haga ante el jefe donde el empleado trabaja. El jefe del departamento juzga la protesta y determina si debe tomarse alguna accion disciplinaria.

Si el jefe no encuetra justificada la reclamacion o protesta, por la nueva proposicion le permite al ciudadano apelar la decision ante la Comision para una audiencia a la cual concurriran el empleado y el recurrente, presentando sus argumentos.

La Comision entonces emitira su laudo que comunicara al departamento afectado, al Concejo municipal y al ciudadano.

La proposicion ha sido preparada despues de muchas reuniones de la Municipalidad con representantes de la Coalicion Minoritaria De Igual Justicia para Todos.

Por mas de un ano la Coalicion ha estado protestando de que el presente sistema de reclamaciones es inadecuado, porque sirve para proteger al empleado y no permite una audiencia ante un departamento imparcial donde presentar la reclamacion.

Duarte aquel tiempo, la Coalicion acuso a la policia de actos brutales y mala conducta que no fueron imparcialmente revisados, dando lugar a que la Coalicion reclamara la creacion una comision revisora de la conducta policiaca.

Teniente policiaco renuncia

Un teniente de la Policia de Chino, origen de controversias sobre los extrajeros ilegales, ha renunciado a sun posicion.

Lt. Robert Williams, un veterano de site anos con el Departamento, presento su renuncia al jefe Gerald Doyle.

Williams, 33, fue acusado de "intimidar" a un ciudadano interesado en el tratamiento a los extranjeros ilegales. Lideres mejico-americanos han acusado que la policia esta arrestando impropiamente extranjeros y sometiendolos a mal trato.

Genaro Zendejas, un trabajador civico de la comunidad, presento una queja contra Williams. Zendejas lo acuso de que Williams le dijo que si a los mejicanos no les gustaba el trato que se les daba "por que ellos no se volvian para Mejico?".

Zendejas tambien dijo que Williams califico una reunion publica a la que el habia atendido, donde se trato el problema de los extranjeros, de una "conferencia comunista".

El viernes no se pudo localizar a Williams para comentar, pero Doyle senalo que la renuncia "no tenia nada que ver" con la protesta de Zendejas. Williams ha resignado para atender un negocio privado, como dueno de un cafe, dijo Doyle.

"No se podia hacer mucho con ese tipo de queja," Doyle anadio, "No hubo violacion de la ley ni de las ordenanzas departamentales."

El Jefe habia dicho en una reunion noviembre 19 sobre los entranjeros ilegales que el soportaba a Williams si hizo "esos comentarios" y prometio discutir la situacion con el.

Doyle dijo el viernes que el no habia pedido la dimision a Williams, y que minguna accion disciplinaria fue tomada contra el motivada por la queja.

with his wife, Lotte, from whom he has just legally separated after 32 years of marriage.

"You don't have to go into that, do you?" he frowns, revealing a chink in the armor of his ego. "I'm not the easiest person to live with," he adds, by way of explanation, "and my own career was kind of crushing her."

Now, the father of two grown children lives in Greenwich Village and is making plans to move, "for the last time," to a nearby brownstone he'll share with Margaret L. Ratner, 30, an associate.

"Margy and I have been together for two years," says Kunstler, whose schedule can have him giving speeches and appearing in court in a half-dozen states in a matter of days.

It is the Center for Constitutional Rights — which he helped found in 1969 to provide legal and financial help in cases involving personal rights — that pays his traveling expenses. But the lectures and court appointments to defend indigent defendants earn him enough to put steak on the table, he says. He won't say how much he earns.

According to one judge familiar with him, "He has a reputation, and he also has made some outrageous out-of-court statements. He has been characterized as a wild man ... Most of the time, in the unpublicized cases, he behaves himself very well."

New York State Supreme Court Justice Arnold G. Fraiman, who tried three Kunstler cases, says he wouldn't describe him as flamboyant.

"In each of those cases," Fraiman comments, "he presented the defense as ably as could be done under the circumstances. He conducted himself in a completely professional and lawyerlike way."

Contending that fame was first exciting to him, then justifying, Kunstler acknowledges that "publicity makes you feel you're worth something." He goes on:

"My ego must be a large part of this. You try to think and you hope to think you're doing more than feed your ego. Sometime you do it for ego, and then you have to re-evaluate yourself."

If, as he hurries from one jet to the next, Kunstler ever wonders whether what he is doing is worth it, he doesn't say so.

However, referring to Joan Little, found innocent of killing her jailer, Kunstler concedes, "You're sometimes paralyzed with despair because you realize, although Joan Little walks, there are 400 like her who go down in the dust. So you have to say Joan Little's case helps her and may help others like her get hip."

Getting them hip — that's why he keeps to an impossible timetable he set for himself, this lawyer who came so late in his life to the movement, thriving on controversy, advancing his principles.

And there is, in his words, just one reason why: "The law is terribly unjust."

County crime commission opposed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — City Attorney Burt Pines has come out in opposition to creation of a county crime commission.

Pines' letter Thursday to the county Board of Supervisors came a day after similar opposition from Los Angeles City Police Chief Edward M. Davis, Sheriff Peter J. Pitchess and Dist. Atty. John Van de Kamp.

Pines said he shared "many of the concerns" of the other three law enforcement officials.

The city attorney, however, said he believed the proposal to set up a crime commission "has had a salutary effect" in causing a self-examination of law enforcement agencies.

'MEMOIRS' — Playwright Tennessee Williams has put together in his newly published "Memoirs" a candid account of a torrid life.

Variety of books available for the theater enthusiast

NEW YORK (AP) — For the avid theater fan, new confessions, comments, digests and jaunts down memory lane.

In other words, the annual Christmas-time array of showbiz fascinators is now at your local bookshop.

Reading may not be as good as seeing, but here is a rundown on 12 recent publications calculated to stir discussion, rouse interest and perhaps make bestseller lists.

Tennessee Williams, an old hand at impressive stagecraft, has in "Memoirs" put together a candid account of a torrid, tormented life. He calls it all "a sort of catharsis of puritanical guilt feelings."

Darting back and forth in time and space, Williams just may be indulging in some whimsical exaggeration of racy exploits from timid boyhood to goatish maturity.

"I could devote a whole book to a discussion of the art of drama," he slyly winks, "but wouldn't that be a bore?" As ever, Williams writes with style and occasionally redeems lurid narration with introspective pauses.

One of Broadway's melody masters, Richard Rodgers, sets down more sedate but highly readable reminiscenses in "Musical Stages."

The composer tells how his interest in music oddly began as an escape "from the generally unpleasant atmosphere" of the parental household. What follows is trenchant detail about the how and why of the 44 shows and hundreds of songs that have since poured from him.

The 73-year-old Rodgers displays no interest in trade gossip or in airing more than basic essentials about his collaborators and other intimates.

On the other hand, Actress Lilli Palmer tells all, as she remembers it anyway, in "Change Lobsters — and Dance." The title comes from "Alice in Wonderland," but the German-born star's story concerns a theatrical circuit stretching from Vienna to Hollywood.

Her marriage to Rex Harrison and its highly publicized spinoffs are here, along with the hazards of entertaining royalty and the charms of second romance. Perhaps to encourage full reading of the vivacious text, there is no index.

For documentation of a playwright's life, there's the first volume of "The Letters of Sean O'Casey." The large, expensive work includes the playwright's epistles from 1910 to 1941. David Krause, one of his biographers, did the editing. There are two more volumes to come. For sheer nostalgia fanciers, Allen Churchill has prepared "The Theatrical 20's," a copiously illustrated survey of one of Broadway's most fabulous decades, before radio, talking pictures or television moved in to compete for mass audience attention. Here is Bela Lugosi doing a Valentino, Ruth Gordon as a teen-ager, and early censorship already raging that "the theater is a sewer." Ah, those golden days of innocence.

Two king-size thespic histories are ready for coffee-table display, "Plays, Players and Playwrights" by Marion Geisinger and "Theatre Through the Ages" by Cesare Molinari.

Miss Geisinger is described as a summer stock performer and show buff, credentials which pretty well summarize her limitations as an editor. The prettily illustrated text opens with ancient Greek dithyrambs, but as the eras pass, the treatment becomes progressively more hurried.

The Molinari volume tackles its subject with the academic meticulousnes expected of a professor of drama at the University of Parma. He reaches further into origins, African as well as Oriental, but considers the American scene only through its exports to Europe. The major assets of the book include magnificent color illustrations but it lacks an index.

Lehman Engle, who has raised his baton over countless Broadway pit orchestras, is out with an updated edition of "The American Musical Theater," authoritative and properly opinionated analysis of where this nation's most distinctive theatrical form is heading.

Urging a new approach to decentralized stage activity is "Royal American Symphonic Theater," by Herman Krawitz with Howard Kelin. The authors have more background in other areas of the performing arts, but their suggestions of more viable organization of resident enterprise are provocative.

Fans who keep complete records of season-by-season activities are sure to be intrigued by "Best Plays 1974-75," edited by Otis L. Guernsey Jr. This is the 59th volume in the perennial series which includes text excerpts from dramas selected by Guernsey as worth preserving, plus detailed records of regional events and prize-winning scripts.

The biggest statistical additions to theatrical libraries are the huge "National Directory of the performing Arts and Civic Centers" and "The National Directory for the Performing Arts-Education."

Mrs. Beatrice Handel, a tireless activist who has participated in institutional organizations from Cleveland to Dallas, compiles the first comprehensive guides to facilities and groups all over the country. Hardly bedside reading, but invaluable reference documents.

WWII story: it was quite an experience

By CONRAD CASLER
PB Correspondent

Thirty-one years ago tonight, a teenaged Alta Loma area lemon picker snuggled down into a frozen Ardennes Forest foxhold in northeastern Belgium for his last night's sleep as a free man for six long months.

Food that night was not what one would call gourmet, but at least it was hot and satiated the appetite of hulking 195-pound John Gill, 19.

The vast northern First Army under Lt. Gen. Courtney Hodges had been bogged down in the Ardennes area since late October following lightning victories with virtually all Belgium now in Allied Control. Farther south, Paris had fallen along with much of France. Much of the stubborn Wermacht had been pushed back into the Fatherland where resistance was heightening.

Just outside the perimeter of the Ardennes Forest, huge cannon manned by German soldiers lay in a constant state of readiness within the Siegfried Line. During the past two months, Gill, a member of a pioneer platoon of demolition, ammunition and construction experts; had studied that line from vantage points just inside the protection of the forest.

He wondered how the Siegfried Line could be breached by foot soldiers such as himself.

Gill also studied each new V-2 rocket as it was launched toward England slightly more than a mile beyond the Siegfried Line. He and other riflemen took sport in shooting at them as they passed overhead along with several machine gunners. But that practice had been stopped several days before when someone got a lucky hit and shot one of the giant missiles down. But it fell in a battalion headquarters behind them wiping out the entire command there.

Orders came down the next day not to shoot at V-2s any more.

Gill also was one of the first persons in the world to watch operational military jets zoom into action from German fields just behind the Siegfried Line. "It was something to see," he said.

The young Alta Loman who moved with his parents and nine brothers and sisters in 1939 to the Southland from Baltimore, was drafted in the spring of 1944 and found himself on foreign soil six months later engaged in the largest war the world had seen up to that time or since.

Gill doesn't remember whether he thought about balmy Alta Loma and California that Dec. 14, 11 days before Christmas.

What he does remember is the ear splintering artillery barrage mounted by Field Marshal Walter Model at 0500 hours the next morning, signalling the beginning of Germany's last ditch effort to split allied armies in half and decimate them.

That battle will remain forever in the minds of Americans as the Battle of the Bulge.

Within an hour after the barrage began, 38 German divisions including mechanized panzer outfits, were pushing west on a 50 mile front. Quickly Gills' 99th Infantry Division was surrounded. Less than a third escaped in the frozen fields near the Malmedy where scores of other GIs were slaughtered in the snow by German tank troops

Pomona crime rate just reflects national trend

According to Pitzer College criminologist

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

If Pomona's homicide rate of 20 in the first six months of this year had continued, it would have given the city one of the highest murder rates in the nation, according to a leading criminologist.

Fortunately, the number of homicides during these past months has dropped markedly, said Laud Humphreys, sociology professor of Pitzer College in Claremont and widely known researcher in the field of criminology.

"While Pomona's statistics are still far higher than the national average, they do reflect the overall trend of increased homicides in cities with a population of 50,000 to 100,000," Humphreys added.

"There has been a shift of homicides out of the inner cities to suburbs and even rural areas," added the professor.

According tothe FBI unified crime reports for the first six months of this year the rate of murders is down two per cent in the inner cities, but up 16 per cent in cities from 50,000 to 100,000 (Pomona 87,000) and up 10 per cent in rural areas where the population is under 10,000.

There are many reasons for the striking increase in murders in the country, according to Humphreys.

He identified three as increased unemployment, especially among the minorities; the shift of population from the inner city to suburbs; and the availability of handguns, many in the hands of youths.

The first reliable homicide rates are from 1933, when at the height of the depression, there was one murder for every 1,000 unemployed persons inthe United States, Humphreys said.

This figure remained fairly stable until World War II when the figure dropped markedly.

"Three reasons are credited for this drop," said Humphreys. "First, unemployment dropped. Second, the nation was dedicated to a cohesive determination for victory and third, the aggressive person who might commit murder was drafted into the service."

The all-time low for homicides in the U.S. was in 1963 when the figure was 4.5 per 1,000 unemployed.

In the past 10 years, the rate was doubled and is now the highest in history, Humphreys said. He sees no reduction of the rate until the unemployment rate drops.

"In fact," added the professor, "The rate may go up to 12 homicides per 100,000 people or 4,800 murders in 1976."

Between 1960 and 1970, crimes of violence involving youths went up 166.8 per cent, according to the FBI figures. On the other hand, all crime increased by 30 per cent in the same time, said Humphreys.

"And that figure was up to 1970. The trend is even worse now," he added.

The heavy shifting of ethnic minorities from the inner cities to the suburbs has brought with it an increase in unemployment and the frustration and rage which such lack of employment fosters, according to Humphreys.

City council will discuss revamping

Pomona City Council Monday will take up proposed revisions in the city's redevelopment process.

Alternatives to be discussed include the formation of small redevelopment project committees, each responsible for a particular project, and a six-member redevelopment steering committee, with representatives from the city and business community, which would coordinate all redevelopment activities.

The council has recently been criticized by the city's redevelopment commission for failing to take prompt action on the proposed revisions, some of which were proposed eight months ago.

Other agenda items for the 8 p.m. meeting include a request for $10,000 from the Community Image Task Force for funding its "Discover-Pomona" campaign.

The 10-month campaign will include media advertisements, newsletters and other methods of promoting Pomona. Total cost is $16,985, which is to be shared by the city, school district and various community and business agencies.

The council will also receive a report on the Pomona chapter of the California Community Alert Patrol (C-CAP), which has been forming neighborhood groups to fight crime in Pomona.

The report was requested about five weeks ago by council members when C-CAP first began to form. The report is expected to state, in essence, that C-CAP can be an asset to the community if its members adhere to their goal of surveillance only and do not attempt to perform any police functions, such as the apprehension of suspicious persons.

Here's a few holiday tips

Pomona Fire Department has issued some warnings and advice about Christmas trees and holiday decorations:

— Make sure your Christmas tree is green and fresh, not losing its needles.

— Don't place your tree near a heater, fireplace or any other source of heat.

— Use only lights that bear a UL label, indicating they have been tested for safety.

— Do not ever place a candle or any burning object on or near the tree.

— Never use other tree decorations that have sharp edges that could cut children or that are shaped like candy or food and might invite a child to swallow them.

— If you have an artificial tree, make sure it bears a UL safety inspection label. Never use electrical lights on a metal tree.

— Only use lights approved for outdoors on the exterior of your home. They should be securely fastened to protect them from wind damage.

— Inspect all lights and decorations and discard those that are broken, loose or have frayed or bare wires.

— Do not place paper wrappings or other flammable materials near a fireplace. They should be placed in a metal can for disposal.

— Family members should take care not to wear loose, flowing clothing near a fireplace because such material is highly flammable.

— Always turn off electrical decorations when retiring or leaving home.

— Keep emergency phone numbers posted near your telephone, and make sure each member of the family knows how to quickly exit the home in the event of fire.

Pomona board looks at purchase offer

Continuation school on agenda

Pomona school board will be asked Tuesday to approve a purchase offer to Southern California Gas Co. for its property on W. 2nd Street as the site for a new continuation high school.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. in city council chambers.

Property administrators recommend that board members purchase a nine-acre site at 1540 W. 2nd St. that would provide 40,000-square-feet of floor space. The asking price is quoted at $750,000.

Lynn Rountree, assistant superintendent of business services, said the district's legal adviser, Mrs. Elaine Canty, was preparing a written purchase offer which would be ready for board consideration Tuesday night.

The district's present continuation high school, Park Avenue High School, opened in 1966 at 605 N. Park Ave., a 2½-acre site.

In recent years it has been described as inadequate and a disgrace to the district.

Nine community sites have been studied for possible relocation. The W. 2nd Street site has been recommended by administrators as the one best suited.

Board members will be asked to accept as an extension of the 1975-76 general fund budget $4,206,164 through federal and state special programs for which the district has been approved. The $32,799,932 general fund budget was approved by the school board on Aug. 7. Addition of the federal and state special projects monies brings the total to $34,006,096.

In addition, the district administers cafeteria and building funds.

Pomona Library presents free program on karate

The Pomona Public Library Monday will present a free program on the martial art of karate.

The program, scheduled for 7:30 p.m., will be presented by Dean Pickard, Tiawa Aponte and students of the U.S. Karate League in Claremont.

Children's programs at the library this week include a Christmas party on Saturday at 2 p.m. The party will highlight a visit by Santa Claus, singing of Christmas carols and a showing of the film "The Story of the Night Before Christmas."

Other holiday programs for children include a crafts session for ages 4 to 9 on Tuesday at 4 p.m.; a preschooler story hour on Wednesday at 10 a.m.; and a showing of family films on Wednesday and Thursday at 7 p.m. Wednesday's film is "The Story of the Night Before Christmas," while on Thursday two films will be presented, "Pluto's Christmas Tree" and "Silent Night, Holy Night."

On Friday, students from the Claremont Community School of Music will present traditional Christmas music at 4 p.m.

El Monte man may have killed self

A 20-year-old El Monte man has been found dead on Glendora Ridge Road — apparently a suicide victim.

The discovery of Richard Satterfield's body inside a van was made Friday by sheriff's deputies, who said that exhaust fumes had been pumped into the interior of the van.

Deputies quoted Satterfield's friends as stating that he had been depressed and had talked of suicide.

The cost of calculator ban

The Maryland chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has asked that state's legislature to ban the use of pocket calculators in the classroom because they are too costly for disadvantaged students, reports Education U.S.A. newsletter.

The group is also worried that the devices will discourage students from doing "the mental computations they're going to have to do to get jobs."

Happily, the first problem is solving itself. Calculators that perform the basic mathematical functions are now down to less than $10 and seem to be approaching the cost of throwaway cigarette lighters.

As for the second objection, both the National Association of Secondary School Principals and the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics have endorsed the minicalculators.

The council lists a number of ways they benefit students, including encouraging them to be inquisitive and creative as they experiment with mathematical ideas. It emphasizes, however, that the devices should be used to reinforce and supplement basic number facts and not as a substitute for the mastering of computational skills.

A recent report by the Conference Board of the Mathematical Sciences also strongly endorses calculators in the classroom and credits them with having improved the performance of low achievers and broken the "self-defeating negative attitudes acquired through years of arithmetic failure."

One thing is certain, says the report, and that is "calculators will soon be a tool available to, and used by, every American" and "an understanding of their capabilities and limitations must be part of everyone's education."

Again, however, the report stresses that calculators should not eliminate the teaching of fundamental mathematical concepts.

All in all, the Maryland NAACP would not seem to be doing disadvantaged students any favor by attempting to deny them a learning tool which technology has created and brought within reach of everyone, or certainly within the budget of even the most impoverished school board.

Silver salvage

Scientists have never been able to achieve the alchemists' dream of changing lead into gold, except at astronomical cost in the nuclear laboratory. But unless some such magic "touchstone" is found, a major shortage of another precious metal, silver, is looming on the horizon.

Worldwide demand for silver has been exceeding production for many years. While consumption has grown by some 32 per cent since 1970, total new production of silver has actually declined.

The difference has been made up by drawing on world stockpiles and, to an increasing degree, reclamation.

One heretofore relatively untapped source of recycled silver is used X-ray film. In the United States especially, due to a rising population and the availability of medical services to more people through Medicare and Medicaid programs, there has been a greatly increased use of X rays.

By law, hospitals and laboratories are required to keep X rays for seven years before discarding them. Thus this increased volume of used film is only now becoming available for recycling.

The largest purchaser of used X ray film, Ag-Met, Inc. of Frackville, Pa., has developed a network of more than 800 hospitals it "mines" for silver.

To recover silver, the discarded X rays are incinerated. This produces a sludge which in turn can be smelted and refined into silver of 99.9 per cent purity. A hundred pounds of X rays yields about a pound and a half of silver.

Ag-Met expects to recycle an estimated seven million ounces of silver in 1975, an imposing figure when it is realized that all the silver mines in the United States will produce only 30 million ounces this year.

Joyce Hifler

Think on these things

Do you drum up things in your mind . . . imagine all sorts of disparaging plots designed to put you down? . . . then you must be pretty average . . . on the same level with many of your fellow human beings . . . because frankly, they don't trust you much more than you trust them . . . so maybe it is true that like attracts like.

It comes as a shock to find our own motives under question . . . whoever would have believed that someone thought I would plot against them? . . . Just about everyone you know that has no faith in himself . . . and consequently, can't trust anyone else . . . we get whatever we give our attention to . . . and that is not always what we want!

"... so we turn our farms into missile sites and oilfields, and buy our grain from the 'shrewd' American businessmen"

Doc Peirsol

Just in jest

You can thank your lucky stars that you are living in this land of the free and home of the brave. Where else but in America, I ask you, would the average person be able, at extremely moderate cost, to acquire an "Instant Memory"? In what other nation are the citizens being offered an opportunity to learn "How to Lose Weight While You Sleep"?

Name me another country where the women are promised that they can add three and one eighth inches to their bustlines in only fourteen days? And finally, where else but in this home of the brave would a dietary expert be telling us how to enjoy health giving food that contains twice the ordinary amount of high protein at only half the normal cost? — All we have to do is eat rice and termite patties.

Paul Harvey

One thing you can count on

One thing you can count on: change. If you don't like the weather — wait. If you don't like the political system — wait.

Our nation has a built-in "revolution" every four years — at least.

Lacking the patience to "wait" and demanding instant change — revolution instead of evolution — is self-defeating in our country.

The changes demanded by the demonstrators of the '60s did come to pass. The war was phased out; the White House was renovated; long hair was accepted.

But those who resorted to violence miss out on the benefits of the change for which they agitated. The dramatics, the histrionics, the threats and the slogans of the '60s are out of date.

All Patty Hearst would really have had to do was wait. More and more it appears that Patty Hearst was introduced to drugs on or about the time of her comic-book kidnaping. There is evidence that at the time of her apprehension she was high on something; "spaced-out," her mother said.

The delusions deriving from drug use vary with individuals, but most users alternate between euphoria and depression. When turned on, some may lie even when it is to their advantage to tell the truth.

So it is impossible for rational observers to anticipate irrational behavior. If you can fully understand the motivations of a Squeaky Fromme or a Patty Hearst, don't admit it. If this personal tragedy is to teach other young people anything, it should be "patience."

Most youngsters play at cops and robbers, but usually in their pre-teens.

When this childish playacting gets confused with reality and one starts playing with real guns, the play actors who imagine themselves "advanced" are in fact "retarded."

The ragtag handful of misfits who called themselves a Symbionese Liberation Army imagined that they were the vanguard of an army of rebellious sons and daughters who would forsake filial ties and accepted morals and mores and persist until they prevailed in overthrowing our nation's established order.

But the more they exposed themselves and their obtuse objectives the more they revealed themselves to be what they are: overage youngsters posturing as Robin Hoods — robbing banks, professing compassion for the poor.

Ironically, their paths of violence led only to the graves of their friends. And the rest of us, watching the anguished dignity of her loving parents, drew closer to them and their kind than to her and hers.

Harassed by agencies

Dear Editor:

Your editorial 12/5/75, "Bureaucrats' deeds live on," is the first echo we've seen to repeated clarion calls which began in 1968.

Yes, a "fourth branch" of government, the regulatory agencies, is strangling the will of this nation. However, like the Congress, these agencies reflect the mood of the people. When "law and order" becomes a roar, a tough bureaucracy stiffens its back and regulates. When not pushed, these agencies unobtrusively service the needs of our nation in a most laudatory manner.

With the death of President John Kennedy in 1963 and the Vietnam war thereafter, our nation's leaders slowly repressed freedom with vise-like power. Our bureaucratic agencies followed this leadership. The F.B.I., C.I.A., I.R.S. and the Secret Service particularly.

This writer was caught up in this hysteria. In 1965 the IRS attached his income. This continued through 1966-1967-1968. Then his employer asked him to resign or be terminated. His wife was forced to get a job to keep the family together. This job was jeopardized by I.R.S. and now California Franchise Tax Board attachments.

The writer sought welfare when his wife was humiliated out of her job. When she found another he refused to advise anyone where she worked, knowing full well it would result in her further harassment by regulatory agencies once he did.

This refusal consituted welfare fraud, according to the L.A. County District Attorney. The writer repeatedly advised politicians and bureaucrats, as well as the media, what was being done to him and his family.

Finally the I.R.S. admitted in writing they had erred. The $25,000 over-assessment in 1964 on his 1961 taxes was in reality non-existent. It was 1970 before this latter development was effective. By then the writer and his wife had experienced foreclosure on their home, daughter and two sons taken out of college and parochial schools respectively, their two cars repossessed, their securities attached and sold at public auction in their community, their country club membership forfeited at considerable loss and their phone disconnected. From 1961 to 1968 the writer's income averaged $30,000 annually and taxes averaging $5,000 cash were paid.

Bureaucrats were driven to the breaking point by the irksome adamancy of the writer. So much so, he was brought to trial on the welfare fraud charge, convicted and sentenced to 16 months in Folsom Prison. He refused to admit guilt and to this day maintains his innocence. To this day, the state of California refuses to take a 1967 levy against this family of eight individuals off the books, even though the I.R.S. has admitted their error. Nothing will budge these appointed bureaucrats.

The legislators responsible for the I.R.S. in 1916 and the FTB of California, never dreamed their actions would allow these agencies to harass the citizenry as they have. What is even worse, the legislators of today are so jellied in the backbone department, they allow it to continue. Obviously they feel they can be intimidated by these agencies should they irk them.

The writer feels it s about time we took an extremely searching look into the monster we have created and allowed to grow within our midst. — Hugh S. Jenings, Barbara L. Jenings

Help is there

Dear Editor:

I — and my entire family — would like this letter published to thank the various community services and also to let people who may not know about these services — to know that when you are in trouble, help is right there!

Three times in the past year and a half, my husband has suffered a heart attack after retiring. The first two times, I called "Operator" and through her fine cooperation and quick action, we had an ambulance here within minutes. While waiting, a police officer came and stayed with me. Believe me, that is indeed a comfort, not to be alone, and the thoughtful consideration of the ambulance men was an added blessing.

This last time, the operator sent the paramedics and I just can't thank those wonderful men enough! They arrived within minutes and administered oxygen and whatever else was needed.

Yes, I had the telephone number of the paramedics on my telephone — but I was so emotionally disturbed and was so busy trying to hold my husband in bed during his attack, the operator's assistance was heaven sent. Thank you, Operator, thank you!

Last, and certainly not least, our most sincere and deep appreciation to those wonderful people in the emergency room at Pomona Valley Hospital!

God bless all you people, with sincere thanks and deep appreciation. — Phyllis LaMear, Claremont

In memory of Drew

WASHINGTON — It wasn't long ago that investigative reporters were the pariahs of Washington journalism. The ruling institutions and their human instrumentalities were accustomed not only to having their way but to receiving only accolades from a press that, except in passing moments of upheaval, was generally docile and respectful.

At the turn of the century, political reporters in the nation's capital were likely to be prestige-conscious peacocks who sported derbies, carried canes, practised affectations, wore grave airs and called themselves "journalists."

Should one of these learn accidentally that a high official was a dipsomaniac, an incontinent a brawler, a bankrupt, an illiterate, an aberrant, a narcoleptic or a senile — the correspondent would not deign to report such distressing news for it would shock his peers, demean his professional dignity and breach the comfortable decorum of the gentlemen's club he fancied he shared membership in with the elect.

My friend and mentor, Drew Pearson, who would have been 78 this month, pioneered the Watergate-style reporting that has become the fashion today. Day by day, he flailed away at the malefactors of the age — imperialists, militarists, monopolists, racists, religious bigots, plutocrats, hypocrites, crooks in government and the swindlers and exploiters of the poor.

In his day, he was more than a menace to the Washington establishment; he was a shock, an affront, a betrayer who could be explained only in terms of a malignant perversion. To his targets, he took on the proportions of an inhuman monster and, by common acknowledgment, was feared and hated as no other reporter before or since.

So often did secret conversations at high-level meetings appear in the Washington Merry-Go-Round that half of the Roosevelt and Truman cabinets were fearful that the other half was leaking to Drew. Secretary of State Cordell Hull once opened a cabinet meeting by exclaiming: "Is this for the room or is it for Pearson?" — a remark which was duly published in the column.

The character of the attacks regularly made on Pearson reflected unnatural animosity. Mere "liar," "cheat," and "scoundrel" would not do. Applied to him, the lexicon of banalities routinely bestowed on detractors was instinctively seen as inadequate. Modifiers were sought by frustrated men anguished beyond endurance to describe a preternatural scourge, a vile and unfathomable evil they had sworn to destroy but, having despaired of doing so, must endure.

Yet, damned though he so often was, no other reporter or publicist could claim a following as massive or as loyal as his. Some read him mainly for the titillation they derived from seeing the private foibles of the famous made public.

But there were many others who genuinely admired him, who loved him for his championship of the helpless against the mighty, the duped against the dupers, or who lived vicariously through him as he smote the great malefactors beyond their humble reach, or punctured the sacred balloons of the day. Whatever the reason, millions paid him the ultimate homage of reading, almost every day for decades, what he had to say.

Yet the polecat in his lair was disarmingly hospitable. Sitting behind his paper-strewn desk in a maroon smoking jacket, or in the bathrobe he wore some days until noon, amid pictures and mementoes of his much-loved family, with a black cat named Cinders preening companionably in the out-box on his desk, he appeared not at all menacing.

A kindly though preoccupied-with-the-world-peril expression suffused his features with an enigmatic quality. He had an impressive, high forehead under thinning light brown hair, and a general look of learnedness that made him seem too dignified and elegant for the rough-and-tumble milieu his reputation evoked.

A certain wariness surfaced in his blue eyes from time to time but otherwise his soft voice, earnest mien and quiet manners, and the peaceful gentility of the atmosphere he worked and lived in, lulled the visitor into the comfortable feeling that he was paying a courtesy call on Mr. Chips.

There was a disconcerting drollery about him. He would introduce a topic with an inward smile that made his eyes crinkle, as if the subject involved humorous allusions with which I must be aware but invariably wasn't. His smile invited a like response, but he would not elaborate on its antecedent and so the park of jollity would fail to ignite, and silence returned.

When frustrated by staff frailties, he did not shout or pound his desk. His rebukes were nonetheless felt. They came in the form of an abrupt withdrawal of his benignity, a sudden remoteness in his tone of voice, so finely tuned as not to be detectable to outsiders who might be in the office.

It is easy in retrospect to see why, among those who did not share Pearson's goals or his Jeffersonian concept of the watchdog role of the press, he was despised and even regarded as a national menace.

During wartime, when government secrecy is invested with the halo of national survival, Drew's exposes of state secrets and military fiascos became particularly infuriating. Thus it was that, at the height of World War II, General George Marshall, the organizer and director of American armies around the globe, refused to move against Pearson.

"No," said Marshall, "Pearson is my best inspector general."

A little advice to a babysitter

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 16-year-old girl who has been reading your column for a long time. I believe you give sound advice. Now I have a problem and I hope you can help me.

I've done babysitting for these people who are friends of my parents. They have four very active children. About four months ago I told the woman I thought I deserved an increase from 50 cents an hour to 75 cents. She said she'd compromise and pay me 60 cents.

I babysat for two other families and received 75 cents an hour from them. I really need the money, but decided not to make an issue of it with this first lady because of the family friendship.

Three weeks ago, The Great Compromiser needed a sitter on short notice. I had another commitment. She begged me to find her another sitter. I did. She paid that girl 75 cents an hour. The following week I sat for her and she paid me 60 cents an hour. I am puzzled by her attitude.

I know this woman likes me and so do her children. I always do a good job and am completely reliable. Why won't she pay me 75 cents an hour? Please answer these questions and give me some advice. — Short-Changed

Dear Short: Would you pay a sitter 75 cents an hour if you knew you could get her for 60 cents? Well — this is the way Mrs. Compromise has it figured.

When you make it clear that you are no longer available at the old price she will either pay the new price or get someone else and pay HER 75 cents an hour.

Dear Ann Landers: A word before the holidays on a problem that has griped me for four years running.

Certain members of my family give homemade clothing for gifts at Christmas time. I'm not a snob about homemade gifts. Some of my relatives sew very well. But I hate to receive a gift with a note in the box that says, "Needs only a hem." — or, "All you have to do is fit this around the waist."

Those "last-minute touches" take anywhere from two to 10 months. For example, last Christmas my mother-in-law made bedspreads for each of the children. They needed to be shortened "slightly." Almost a year has passed and I still haven't gotten around to it. How much better it would have been had Grandma purchased something. Anything.

Please say a word or two in your column about sending unfinished gifts, Ann. I'm sure this problem is not mine alone.— Finish It Or Don't Send It

Dear F.I.: I'm with you. Here's my message.

Dear Readers: When you send someone an unfinished gift, you are sending them work. I can't say it any plainer than that.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 15-year-old girl who is worried about becoming an egomaniac. Whenever I pass a mirror I have to stop and look at myself. When I walk down the street, I often sneak looks at my own reflection in the store windows. Is this normal? I am — Secretly Worried

Dear S.W.: There's nothing abnormal about enjoying a quick glimpse at yourself in a mirror or sneaking a look at your reflection in a store window. If you stood for hours admiring yourself, I'd say you had a problem. But "Vanity, thy name is woman," and it shall be ever thus!

Hot flea collar can harm cat

DEAR DR. MILLER: It was just about this same time last year that our part Siamese cat, Tie, began acting dumpy and sickish. He was lying around on top of the radiator all the time, which is just what he's doing now. While we were looking at him to see if he was burning himself (he wasn't), we noticed his neck was irritated, so what we did was keep him off the radiator and throw away his flea collar. He got better. This year, same thing. We're trying the same no-collar, no-heat cure. Will it work again? Questions are why would heat bother him like that when he's not burning himself, and could the flea collar really have anything to do with it? — N.S.

DEAR N.S.: Since some cats will deliberately expose themselves to enough heat to cause burns, that has to be the first concern. Second, any superheated cat carrying a flea collar is in danger of becoming a feline fatality from flea collar poisoning. The dichlorovos-impregnated plastic collars release their potent poison much more rapidly than normal when exposed to high temperatures. The result can be severe ulcerative skin lesions under the collar and/or generalized, potentially fatal, poisoning. Obviously then, Tie or any other feline frequenting "hot spots" as part of its daily routine should not be wearing a plastic flea collar.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Good Morning, my mouse, died. Someone said I killed her because I fed her too much cod liver oil??? — L.Y.

DEAR L.Y.: Too much any oil could cause digestive disturbances. Rancid cod liver oil can be toxic. An excess can cause a Vitamin E deficiency. Whether any of the above problems occurred or are related to Good Morning's mysterious demise can't, of course, now be determined.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Last summer when Lady had bad skin, a shot of cortisone cleared it right up. It's gotten bad again lately, but should she have another shot when she's pretty far along with her pregnancy, or does it make any difference? — B.B.

DEAR B.B.: Lady's doctor is the one to determine what she should have in the way of medication. However, late-term pregnancy would have a bearing on his recommendations. Cortisone injections are seldom used late in pregnancy since they may initiate first stage labor or cause other related problems.

What people say

"The urge to legislate in haste and repent in leisure — not just on the part of Congress but on the part of the people who elect the Congress — is greater now than at any time since the early 1930s, in a nation that doesn't know quite what it wants but is terribly impatient with what it has."

For Monday, Dec. 15

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be extra careful today in financial dealings. You are susceptible to outside pressures that could cause you loss.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Someone who did a favor for you will seek its return today. Balance what they did for you against what they are requesting.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Problems you become enmeshed in today will probably be of your making. Don't blame someone else for your plight and thus irritate them.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't prevail upon friends to do physical work for you today. Eliminate headaches. Hire a professional.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Curb your enthusiasm before associates about a project you're vitally interested in. They're not necessarily sold on it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Square pegs don't fit in round holes, though that's the way you want it today. Back off when you find you're putting things in the wrong places.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Keep out of a friend's complex business affairs today. Your simplistic solution may make you the scapegoat they're seeking.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) This is not a good day to try to iron out a problem where money is an issue. Neither party will be happy at the outcome.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You'll be a bit irritated today by a friend who'll request aid in a very demeaning manner. Let him fend for himself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Avoid doing anything socially today where you feel your presence is obligatory. You won't have fun. Others will be aware of it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) There's a good possibility domestic disturbances will erupt today. Keep cool. Don't pull an "I told you so."

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Things that normally wouldn't faze you will irritate you today, particularly if you're around people whose actions have bothered you in the past.

Your Birthday Dec. 15

The coming year holds a lot of promise, especially if you're ambitious enough to go after things. The goals you set may be lofty, but they are attainable.

Records for all occasions

I'm one of those women who believe that life will continue even if I don't know that quarterback Charlie Fuggs needs 14 passes to move ahead of the legendary Orlow Spitt, who threw 6,443 completions for a combined yardage of 36,033 yards — 1,500 of them while wearing SuppHose.

Maybe it's not a complete, full life, but I'm willing to make sacrifices. My husband is not.

He believes there has not been a prophet like Curt Gowdy since Moses and that when Curt announces someone has broken Johnny Unitas's record of 26 passes in a sudden-death playoff, there will be a flash of lightning and rain for 40 days and nights.

"Who cares?" I shouted back at the set.

"Shhh," he said motioning for silence.

"They could make up those statistics and . . ."

"Will you knock it off," said my husband. "Now I'll never know who holds the record for fumbles in the NFL during a nationally-televised game which was attended by a Vice President."

"If you're so impressed by statistics," I said hysterically, "I'll give you some statistics. Did you know:

"The record for rushing is held by your son, who has been the first one to answer the phone on the first ring for the last five years?

"Did you know that I lead the Domestic League in toilet tissue spindle changing? I have single-handedly changed the spindle 6,340 times and lead by 60 rolls the closest contender, Brenda Claptree, who signed on with the Hiltons?

"Are you remotely interested that a little known draft choice, who as a kid used to hang around the kitchen a lot and dream, now picks up 184 pairs of socks a day in her son's bedroom?

"Maybe you'd be interested in how many incomplete sentences I toss out a day that no one listens to or answers? Or how many times I've intercepted the car keys so we can use our own car once in awhile?

"You want color? I'll give you color. We have two brothers playing on the same team for dishes. I think if you'll check the record book you will find we have not had that kind of a relationship between siblings since Cain and Abel were a duo back in Genesis."

I looked at my husband. He hadn't heard a word I said. Oh well, I just witnessed another record for a shutout . . . eight months and four days.

The benefits of various fats

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I think two of your statements in a recent column are contradictory. You said that decreasing saturated fat and increasing polyunsaturated fat in the diet is beneficial, but then you said too much of either will raise your cholesterol level. Isn't it true that as long as you have a favorable ratio of unsaturated fats to saturated fats the more fat you consume the better it is for the cholesterol reading? I'm leaving aside, for the moment, the problem of increased calorie intake with the fat intake.

DEAR READER — No, if you read my comments correctly they are not contradictory. I said that with regard to decreasing saturated fats and increasing polyunsaturated fats, safflower oil is the superior to corn oil. May I point out that not all investigators believe that you get lots of benefit from polyunsaturated fat.

Then I went on to say that too much of either fat could increase the cholesterol.

The point is this, you should limit your total fat intake to no more than 35 per cent of your total calorie intake. That means all fat, saturated, monounsaturated, and polyunsaturated fat. Some new products on the market which advertise that they are high in polyunsaturated fat and low in saturated fat are not all that good, because they are high fat foods and must be used in moderation. The second limitation is on saturated fat which should be limited to no more than 10 per cent of your calories.

Clearly, if half of one's calories are from unsaturated fat that is too much. These are the recommendations of The Inter-Society Commission on Heart Disease to prevent heart and vascular disease. I do not recommend a binge of consuming polyunsaturated fat to help lower your cholesterol.

Your intake of polyunsaturated fat should equal your intake of saturated fat. The rest of the fat can come from the monounsaturated fats.

For a more complete discussion on fats you can send in 50 cents for The Health Letter, number 1-2, Cholesterol, Triglycerides, Blood Fats, Atherosclerosis, with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Send your request to me in care of The Progress Bulletin, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. That issue will clarify terms of saturated fat, monounsaturated fat, polyunsaturated fat, triglycerides, lipoproteins, and cholesterol commonly used in discussion of fatty-cholesterol deposits that cause heart attacks, strokes, and other vascular disease.

The need to limit calorie intake to avoid obesity demands that most people limit their fat intake. Remember, there are nine calories in one gram of fat compared to four calories in one gram of either carbohydrate or protein.

Most high-fat foods contain little bulk and are not diluted with water. A pound of fat is all calories. By contrast, a pound of vegetables or fruit which is mostly carbohydrate is greatly diluted with water and bulk. Only a fraction of their weight is really useable carbohydrate. Lean meat is a small amount of protein expanded with a lot of water.

Concentrated foods, such as fats, oils, lard, margarine, or butter, as well as concentrated sweets such as sugar, honey, and syrups must all be limited in the diet if you really want to limit the calorie intake.

Opening lead — K ♠

By Oswald & James Jacoby

For a few years in the early '30s the laws of contract provided a 2250-point bonus for a vulnerable grand slam and 1500 points for one bid when not vulnerable.

When Olga Hilliard (one of the great woman players of that time) picked up the South hand in a rubber bridge game, her first thought was to open with a seven-diamond bid. Her second thought was that if she did that her opponents would bid seven in a major suit and take whatever penalty they might incur.

So Olga just opened two diamonds and continued to rebid in minimums. West bid all the way to five spades and then fell into her trap and doubled her at six.

Olga didn't redouble. That might have let the cat out of the bag. She just passed, ruffed the spade lead, drew trumps and claimed all the tricks. She didn't get the grand slam bonus, but she did get the small slam and rubber bonus, 240 points below the line, 150 honors, and 200 points for the extra trick. A lot better than 300 points for setting seven spades two tricks, doubled.

Ask the Jacobys

An Ohio reader asks us about the late William E. McKenney.

Oswald answers. Bill was a very dear friend. As executive secretary of the ACBL during its formative years he was largely responsible for its great success. He was author of this column until his death in 1949. The McKenney trophy is one of the most valued bridge awards.

Thompsons gain in name ratings

Latest tally of the five most common surnames in this country in descending order are Smith, Johnson, Williams, Brown and Jones. That's no news. The first five have not changed their order in a long time. One name is gaining ground on the long list in a rapid manner, however. Just a few years ago, it was 15th. Now it's up in the top 10. That's Thompson. Clearly, Thompsons tend to be more prolific than most.

DATES

Oman is a country about the size of Kansas in the Middle East. Besides oil, its principal crop is dates. Every date tree there is registered in the name of its owner. Dying men bequeath date trees to offspring. Not the land on which the date trees grow. The trees themselves. Doting fathers give date trees as dowries. Public benefactors deed date trees to deserving causes. Immobilized as they are, they're not exactly a kind of currency, those date trees. But they're certainly a measure of wealth.

EARTH

Did I tell you that the diameter of the earth is 26.53 miles shorter at the poles than at the equator? It's sort of pumpkin shaped, but not exactly. Watch this space for all you ever wanted to know about poles, equators and pumpkins. It's fifth in size among the planets, incidentally, the earth is.

IT'S NOT TRUE to say that men are more likely than women to cry with an overflow of tears. It is true, though, that men are more apt to get just slightly misty eyed in emotional situations. Or so a medical scholar reports.

I CAN'T REMEMBER if I ever told you about that intriguing main corridor of the city hall in Stockholm. In several niches there are bronze busts. Two, the man who put in the most days on the job. Three, the man who hammered in the metalwork. Their memorials were voted in by their fellow artisans.

To beat inflation

Oven cleaner easy to make

By NORMAN H. STARK

Cleaning an oven is a dirty job that most people detest. But you can make the job a little less irksome when you make your own oven spray cleaner and also save a lot of money.

Making it is simple and inexpensive. Here's the inflation-beater formula:

Mix one cup of sodium perborate (from your druggist) with one cup soda ash, one-half cup trisodium phospate, and two tablespoons powdered soap. (Get all of these from your hardware dealer.)

Mix one cup of this dry compound into one quart of warm water. Pour the solution into a plastic spray bottle (also from your hardware store, or super market), and spray inside of your oven. Allow to soak for 20 to 30 minutes. Wipe out oven with a cloth or sponge. Rinse with clear water.

The cost of making your own oven spray cleaner is approximately four cents per ounce. To determine your savings, divide the cost of your store-bought brand by the number of ounces it contains. Then compare the per ounce cost — you'll be surprised at how much you can save for so little effort.

Note: Material costs are based on the prices at retail outlets of national drug, grocery and hardware chains. These costs will vary, depending on the geographic area. If you wish to make up a larger quantity — and save even more — buy your materials at a chemical supply company.

Like any product you make at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

(For a free information bulletin describing the sources of chemicals and the easiest methods of obtaining them, send a long, self-addressed, stamped evenlope to: FORMULA BULLETIN, P. O. Box 2218, Mission, Ks. 66201.)

About this-that

A Denver man, who asked not to be identified, has sent us his correspondence with the Postal Service over a lost money order. Exasperated, he finally decided to file a class action suit and wrote the Justice Department for background information. The letter was returned to him, stamped "Unable to Locate," by the mailman.

after they had surrendered.

There frozen bodies were discovered when snow melted the next spring.

One regiment of the 99th Infantry Division managed to escape in front of the onrushing Hun hordes. But Gill's units quickly were surrounded. They managed to fight for two days.

As dawn broke 48 hours later, Gill reflects, first light revealed a German behind every tree and bush in the dense forest. Only 40 of his 1,000-man strong battalion survived by this time.

"As the light got stronger, we saw one of our young second lieutenants standing out there with a German behind him pointing a burp gun at his neck. They told him to tell us to surrender. He did a good job of it."

So swift was the German Battle of the Bulge advance, that within that 48-hour period, the 99th Division and other American units were not only surrounded but cut off by 150 miles from other American units in the German march toward the North Sea and Antwerp.

"We buried the muzzles of our rifles in the mud, put our hands on our heads and were marched off to the Siegfried Line bunkers and pillboxes for interrogation before we were marched another 15 kilometers to a barn.

"By this time I no longer had boots, just my overshoes. When we surrendered, my shoes were wet, so I took them off and tied them together and hung them around my neck. A German soldier saw them and took them.

"After questioning, we were marched to a barn and stayed there with other captured troops for five days. Our rations were one large or two small boiled potatoes a day there.

"Then they marched us to Bonn — about 80 miles away — in 1½ days," Gill said. "Those who couldn't keep up were shot along the roadside. We were walking but all the guards had bicycles.

"We spent Christmas Eve and Christmas day in Bonn. Then we were loaded aboard trains to take us as slave labor to a sugar mill. But we learned that plant had been bombed and we were returned. Then we were put aboard boxcars on another train and taken to Stalag (prison camp) 4B about 60 miles from Dresden.

"That originally had been a British POW camp. We were put to work in a steel mill. We worked 12 hours a day, six days a week. One week we'd work nights and the next we'd work days. For this we got a liter (about a quart) of potato soup and an eighth of a loaf of German hard bread. Many of the men died right off. Their bodies could not adjust to that diet.

"One Minnesota Swede iron miner was huge. Our diet wasn't much to us, but it was much less to him because of his size. He just shriveled up and died.

"I guess we worked in those steel mills about three months until our strength was gone and our production levels fell. There were 100,000 slave laborers in that mill, mostly Russian with the rest American and British prisoners.

"When we were too weak to continue there, we were put on trains again and sent to another camp to work on the railroad connecting Czechoslovakia and Dresden. That camp was almost on the Czech border.

"I had managed to fashion a knife, and when the spring thaws hit, dandelions began pushing up. I perfected a way to bend down and cut them off and stuff them into my pockets without the German guards noticing. I put those dandelions in my potato soup at night for added nourishment. Others couldn't do that because of the taste, I guess. They died.

"Our guards mostly were old men. One of ours was 80-years-old. The young ones had to be too badly wounded for front line duty.

"We learned German somewhat just to get along. One young American paratrooper was standing above us on a railroad bank one cold day leaning on his shovel huddled down in his coat. A German guard saw him and started screaming in German.

"We told him to get busy. He said, 'I don't understand German.' We told him, 'It doesn't make any difference. When they start yelling, start working.'

"The closer that guard came, the louder he yelled. He walked up behind that boy and hit him in the neck with his rifle butt. He was dead from a broken neck when he rolled down that hill and stopped at our feet.

By the end of April, Russian troops were almost in Berlin and Americans had linked up with the Soviets at the Elbe River.

"Our camp guards with the Russians close by decided to march us 250 kilometers down through Czechoslovakia and west to American lines to turn us over and surrender themselves.

"We moved out on a Monday morning in the first part of May. Russian planes were everywhere and they attacked us on the road. A lot of our boys died from Russian bullets and too much exertion. We started out with 1,800 American prisoners and some 800 British. About half we lost that first day out.

"The second day when we stopped marching for the night, we came across a German horsedrawn convoy which had been destroyed by the Russians. All those dead horses were everywhere. We all broke and tore down fences to build fires and butchered those horses for dinner. When we finished that first good meal in months, our bodies reacted and all of us were too sick to move.

"Because it was night and those fires attracted the Russians, our guards deserted us and we were abandoned between the German and Russian armies.

"Four of my fellow prisoners and I made a pact there, that we would move together on an all-for-one-and-one-for-all basis. We decided to head back to Dresden and try to catch a train to American lines after several days of recovering from that meal. By this time the war had ended but everything was chaos.

"We walked some 80 kilometers and hitched some rides on American Lend Lease trucks we'd given the Russians and made it to Dresden."

By this time, Gill was an emaciated 110 pounds and was walking with the aid of two canes. But he and his four comrades fought their way aboard a train and finally made it to Chemnitz where he was repatriated by American troops.

Within three weeks, Gill was headed back home aboard a ship and a train ride to the West Coast. By the next Christmas (1945) he was mustered out of service and returned to lemon ranching and later aircraft work in the Cucamonga area.

For the past six years, Gill has been maintenance supervisor for the Alta Loma Elementary School District.

One of his duties is hauling between 130 and 160 hot lunches daily from Alta Loma Elementary School to Alta Loma Junior High School which has no cafeteria.

"I stand out there and talk to the kids and watch them eat — and watch what they throw away. You wouldn't believe it," Gill said remembering his six months of starvation.

"I tell them to eat that food and not to throw it away. Their parents worked hard to buy that food for them. They don't realize what food can mean."

Gill stared at a wall not seeing it while remembering his experience three decades earlier.

"I think I'm entitled to tell those kids to eat their lunch," he said.

Harbor traffic in slight drop

LOS ANGELES (AP)— November shipping traffic at Los Angeles-Long Beach harbors declined in November, with only 396 vessels arriving compared with 400 ships in the previous month and 408 for November last year.

Harbor officials said net tonnage in November, however, rose to 4.65 tons from 4.1 million tons in November 1974.

Ships calling at Los Angeles-Long Beach harbors in November included 270 passenger and cargo liners, 105 tankers and 21 ships in other categories.

The oldest national anthem is the "Kimigayo" of Japan.

German town gets ready for 'Heinz'

FUERTH, West Germany (AP) — Bursting with pride, this north Bavarian city is preparing a big welcome home for "Heinz" Kissinger, the local boy who became U.S. secretary of state. His former baby sitter fondly remembers him as a "fat little devil with lots of hair."

Four hundred Fuerth residents will be at the city theater Monday to see Henry A. Kissinger receive Fuerth's highest award, the Golden Citizen's Medallion, and an "honor needle" with four leaf clover from the Fuerth soccer club he played for as a youth.

Other guests at the ceremony marking Kissinger's 1973 Nobel Peace Prize will be his father, 89-year-old Louis Kissinger, and his mother, Paula, who are returning from New York to the city they fled in 1938 to escape Hitler's wave of terror against Germany's Jews.

West German Foreign Minister Hans Dietrich Genscher and Bavarian State Minister-President (governor) Alfons Goppel also will attend the ceremony in this industrial city of 96,000 residents.

Kissinger and his wife, Nancy, are flying to Nuernberg airport Monday morning from London and will be driven to nearby Fuerth in their armored limousine. The route was being kept secret for security reasons, local newspapers reported Friday.

After the ceremony, the Kissingers will attend a banquet featuring specialties such as bratwurst and then visit the family's old neighborhood where only several hundred Jews remain from a prewar population of several thousand.

"He was a fat little devil with lots of hair," Kissinger's former baby sitter, a 65-year-old German woman, told the Munich newspaper, Sueddeutsche Zeitung.

"As a school boy, Heinz had no complexes," reported Fred Bechhofer, a grade school friend. "His report cards often contained notations like impudent and disturbed the classroom."

Beila Rosenkranz, another Fuerth schoolmate, remembers Kissinger as a student of average ability who was "not especially good."

Henry's report card from that era showed marks of "very good" in religion and history, "good" in mathematics but only "passing" in English and gym, the newspaper said.

Russia sowing arms, influence in Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Soviet penetration of black Africa, most visible in war-torn Angola, has now reached its highest mark since Western powers began the decolonization of the continent nearly two decades ago.

Intelligence sources here estimated some 150,000 tons of military equipment have been supplied by Moscow to Angola's Marxist Popular Movement — MPLA — in recent months, including automatic weapons, ammunition, explosives, armored personnel carriers, antiaircraft guns, mortars, rockets and possibly ground to air missiles.

Cuban troops are now openly leading MPLA units in Angola in clashes with pro-Western movements in the newly independent Portuguese territory. Several Cubans have been captured.

This unprecedented and fast-flowing influx of foreign arms into Africa has given the MPLA a clear military edge in Angola's civil war and has forced an anxious West into increasing support of the rival National Front — FNLA — and National Union — UNITA.

U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said in Brussels on Friday that if Africans themselves can't resolve the Angolan conflict the United States would try to prevent the Soviet-supplied faction from achieving dominance.

Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa and a member of the Senate foreign relations committee, said Thursday that American aid to the anti-Soviet factions has already cost close to $50 million. They are also reportedly getting varying degrees of help from Zaire, South Africa and several European countries. Clark later denied making the statement.

Within black Africa, Moscow's presence in Angola already has the open support of Guinea-Bissau, Guinea, Equatorial Guinea and the Congo Republic on the west coast and Somalia and Mozambique on the Indian Ocean. In addition, a number of African countries have jumped in to recognize the MPLA as the only legal goverment in Angola.

Other African states, however, are deeply concerned about the Soviet bid for a foothold in southern Africa, particularly Zaire and white-ruled Rhodesia and South Africa. Other black African states are troubled but have publicly remained silent.

To them, the massive Soviet intervention in Angola with arms and Cuban troops appears aimed at creating a strategic string of pro-Soviet regimes across Africa.

Jonas Savimbi, leader of the rival pro-Western National Union in Angola, echoed their fears earlier this week when he said:

"No one can assure us that tomorrow they (the Soviets) will not intervene in another independent country.

"The face Russia is showing in Angola should be a warning to the continent. It should remind us of the Soviet intervention in Czechoslovakia and Hungary."

The Soviet Union recently supplied a squadron of MIG21s and other military hardware to Uganda, whose President Idi Amin is current chairman of the Organization of African Unity and has openly armed liberation movements in Rhodesia and South-West Africa.

Moscow also provides direct military aid to Zambia, Tanzania, Nigeria, Benin (formerly Dahomey), Central African Republic, Upper Volta, Burundi and Mali. The Russians — either directly or through Cuba and other allies — provide military advisers to most of these countries.

The Soviet navy has used the port at Conakry, the capital of Guinea, for several years and more recently Soviet warships have called in Equatorial Africa.

Tanzania, although generally regarded as pro-Chinese, has allowed its port and capital of Dar es Salaam to be used for shipments of arms to Angola for several months. The Russians have also used the Congo Republic as a major transhipment point for the arms.

Angola would be the biggest prize in the Soviet Union's growing sphere of influence in Africa if the MPLA emerges victorious.

The country is regarded as potentially one of the wealthiest in Africa with vast and largely untapped riches of oil, minerals and agricultural produce.

Soviet naval and air bases in Angola could threaten Western shipping in the South Atlantic using the Cape sea route for oil shipments from the Persian Gulf. Shipping through the Suez Canal is already threatened by Soviet airfield and missile-storage facilities in Somalia and Aden.

Western diplomats are also concerned that Angola could be used as a base for subversion of mineral-rich Zaire, Zambia and other states. And with Mozambique, it could serve as a springboard for black guerrilla movements in Rhodesia, South-West Africa and even South Africa.

The civil war in Angola now appears to have reached a military stalemate with the MPLA in control of the capital of Luanda and a stretch of land some 250 miles wide stretching eastward to the Zambian border.

UNITA controls the southern third of Angola and perhaps half the population while the FNLA has its stronghold in the northern third.

China at one time was providing arms and advisers to the FNLA in Zaire but claims to have dropped its support. Reports from Kinshasa, the Zaire capital, suggest North Koreans have taken over the Chinese roles.

Valley priest honored

New Papal honors have been bestowed by Pope Paul VI on 10 priests of the Los Angeles archdiocese, according to an announcement by Cardinal Timothy Manning.

Seven pastors, including the Rev. Msgr. William J. Barry of Our Lady of the Assumption Catholic Church, Claremont, were appointed Prelates of Honor. Monsignor Barry had been honored by the Pope earlier as Chaplain of His Holiness.

Monsignor Barry, in addition to his pastoral duties, is archdiocesan director for the Cardinal McIntyre Fund for Charity, the Campaign for Human Development and the Catholic Church Bicentennial program.

Msgr. Benjamin G. Hawkes, pastor of St. Basil Church and Vicar General of the archdiocese, was named a Prothonotary Apostle. Two other priests were named Chaplains of His Holiness.

Scrols, certifying their appointment in November by the Pope, will be presented to the honored priests by Cardinal Manning at noon Mass on Friday in Immaculate Conception Church, Los Angeles. The honorees will concelebrate the Mass with the Cardinals.

Persors interested in attending will be welcome.

Boy scouting seen costly but beneficial

Quality scouting for valley boys is costly but well worth it in character development and mental and physical fitness, a scouting official says.

Donald R. DesCombes, treasurer for the Old Baldy Council, said some of the cost is paid by the boy, his unit, the chartered organization and the local and nationa organization.

DesCombes explained that he boy pays a national membership fee, buys his own uniform, books, and equipment, and pays dues into his unit treasury — preferably earning the money for these personal expenses.

His troop or pack pays its way from the boys' weekly dues and money earned through approved projects.

Even the chartered organization, which owns the unit, is responsible for a meeting place, competent volunteer leadership who pay their own expenses, and other resources.

The Old Baldy Council prepares an operating budget to serve the units, and these funds come from United Ways and the annual Friends of Scouting enrollment among members, parents, and friends of scouting.

Finally, DesCombes said, the national organization coordinates and stimulates the program nationally and develops program materials. These services are paid from membership fees and other income that is put back into the program.

The Old Baldy Council is a member agency of United Way Inc. United Crusade, West End United Way, and Greater Fontana United Way which provided about 58 per cent of the local operatingg budget.

Sark islanders prefer to stick to old lifestyle

SARK, Channel Islands (AP) — Like a passenger in a time machine, Michael Beaumont, the new Seigneur of Sark, has made a smooth transition from guided weapons design engineer to feudal lord of the tiniest state in the British Commonwealth.

From the intricacies of the Rapier missile to the idylls of a fief also entails an economic odyssey that might hold some sort of moral for the modern world. While his former employers, the British Aircraft Corporation, go millions of pounds in the hole producing a supersonic airliner in cooperation with the French, Beaumont rules over a solvent little island that pays him homage with a "poularde" — a chicken tax — on every chimney, and year after year manages to show a budget surplus.

"Of course it's getting more difficult. Since the Arabs raised the price of oil, there really is nowhere to hide from inflation: not even on Sark," said the 48-year-old Seigneur, looking out the tall windows of La Seigneurie, the brooding gray stone manor, partly Elizabethan, that is home to holders of the Sark Fiefdom.

Out on the lawn, Candy, by law the only female dog allowed on the island, frisked playfully after the fantail pigeons, also exclusive to the Seigneur, under the medieval right of colomberie, the privilege of keeping a dovecote, in the royal charter granted by Elizabeth I in 1565.

As owner of a Fief Haubert, the highest class of Knighthood, Beaumont is also entitled to "all flotsam and jetsam" on the island, one-tenth of the corn harvest, and to walk across anyone's land. In return, he is obliged to "pay homage to the Queen in person and to supply on demand a horseman fully accoutred with haubert (a coat of mail), helmet, shield and the complete armor of a knight."

On this lovely fall morning, the Seigneur was fully accoutred in paint-blotched slacks and a Guernsey sweater to do a bit of gardening. "When I was a boy," he said, "There were three gardeners about the place. Now we make do with a part-time man a few mornings a week."

Accessible only by boat and then only on the best of days, the picture island of Sark lies 20 miles off the coast of France amid the treacherous rocks and tempestuous tides of the Gulf of St. Malo.

Three miles long by a mile-and-a-half wide, the last bastion of feudalism turns its granite back on the world with sheer 300-foot cliffs and an impressive set of negatives. No automobiles. No paved roads. No industries. No unions. No death duties. No divorce. Never a form to fill out or a parking ticket to mail in.

Sark doesn't have a hospital, a high school or a newspaper. There is no dentist, no pharmacist, no barber and, at the moment, no hairdresser.

"Christine, who does women's hair, is off on Guernsey having a baby," explained the Seigneur, who inherited the fiefdom a little over a year ago when his grandmother, Sibyl Hathaway, the almost legendary Dame of Sark, died at the age of 90, after presiding over her mini-domain for nearly half a century. Her spirit lives on in the West End hit play, "The Dame of Sark," a dramatic tribute to her icy courage and hauteur in carrying on as usual during the nazi occupation in World War Two, even to rebuking the German commandant for violating the island's automobile ban by introducing an armored car.

Beaumont confesses to "a serene contentment" in giving up a career in aeronautics and a suburban house with a two-car garage in Bristol to move his wife, Diana, and their teen-age boys to a windswept promontory in the English Channel, over which airplanes are forbidden to fly under 2,000 feet and where there is now pressure on Chief Pleas, the Island's Parliament, to curb the 40 or so tractors from cutting about as impromptu taxis. Both he and his wife have passed the tractor driving test given by lobsterman Dick Adams, Sark's unpaid constable.

During our two-day stay, the island population dropped from 496 to 494, with the deaths of two octogenerians, and John Guille, the landlord of the Mermaid Tavern, had to close his pub and assume his alternate skill as undertaker.

At a time when France was threatening war and England worried about her Channel defenses, Elizabeth I granted the uninhabited island, then "a place for pirates, thieves and such like," to landowner Helier de Carteret of Jersey on condition that he keep 40 armed men capable of defending the island continually in residence. To ensure this, Helier divided Sark into 40 property holdings, which still remain and cannot be divided and whose owners have the right to a seat in Chief Pleas, along with 12 "people deputies" elected from the island at large.

The old Sarkees, speaking a Norman French patois that even the French tourists cannot understand, are gradually giving way to what the islanders call "the colonials," retired British civil servants and even affluent company directors seeking to stretch their pensions in a nearby tax haven. To hold the clock back, the Parliament has passed a LINK WITH WORLD — A boat puts out from Sark — and leaves the tiny island in the English Channel, amid its treacherous rocks and tides, inaccessible until the next boat. From April until October, Sark, population about 490, is visited by some 50,000 tourists on day trips. In winter, gales permitting, there are only three boats a week and none on Sunday.

SARK'S SEIGNEURS — Michael Beaumont, Seigneur of Sark, and his wife, Diana, pose in front of La Siegneurie, the lordly manor house. The 48-year-old Siegneur, formerly a guided weapons design engineer, is now feudal lord of the tiniest state in the British Commonwealth — Sark, three miles long, a mile and a half wide, lies 20 miles off the coast of France.

two-year ban on new buildings, while providing free land and in some cases free houses for young married couples descended from old Sark families.

Some 50,000 tourists, most arriving by boat for a day in the season that stretches from April to early October, pay a landing tax of 10 pence (20 cents) and a small levy on alcohol and tobacco. These are the main supports for Sark's annual budget of 55,000 pounds ($110,000), which pays the salaries of two fulltime teachers, a part-time French teacher for the compulsory French lessons, three island workmen, a clerk and a treasurer, with enough left over to maintain the dirt roads and harbor, provide medical care for the needy and send a deserving child off to college.

Most islanders now pay a token 50 pence (one dollar) poulardе tax instead of presenting a chicken at the Seigneur's door, but at today's poultry prices Beaumont wishes more would turn up with an actual bird in hand. When one of the 40 pieces of property is sold, the Seigneur is entitled to a knight's fee of one-thirteenth of the sale price. Since these lands are now worth up to 100,000 pounds ($200,000), the "treizeime," as it is called, can keep the manor house going for quite a while.

Still, to keep up with rising costs, Beaumont is turning part of the rambling manor into two apartments for tourists.

Sark receives no financial assistance from Britain and does not share in its extensive welfare services, but it has a way of taking care of its own.

"On a small island where everyone is known you don't need a huge faceless bureaucracy to find out who is in need," said the Seigneur. "Sark is a very caring society."

Pollution is an increasing problem. Sark has no sewers or garbage disposal plant. In their resistance to change, the islanders year after year reject master plans for zoning and drainage. "They feel what was good for their ancestors is good enough for them," said Scott. "Like rejecting the proposal for an electric crane down at the harbor and keeping the old hand cranked one. I wince every time a high wind smashes a pallet of whisky against the sea wall, but they prefer the old ways. That's why Sark will continue to beat the clock."

Yule show slated in San Dimas

The San Dimas Recreation Department will present a free Christmas show on Tuesday in the Community Building, beginning at 7 p.m.

The show will feature students from the tap, ballet, baton, acrobatics, song-dance, modern jazz and guitar classes. Persons wishing additional information may call the recreation department, 599-7613, Ext. 40.

The department will conduct a basketball skills contest on Dec. 22 at San Dimas High School. The contest check-in time is 10 a.m. The first event will begin at 10:30 a.m.

Boys and girls, ages 8 to 14 years, will compete for awards against others in their own age and grade group. Competitors will face each other in five different skill events.

Winners will be determined by a total points score. Pre-registration will guarantee participation. Registrations are being accepted at San Dimas City Hall from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Covina hospital looking for Yule gift: blood

Christmas will come early at Inter-Community Hospital, Covina, when area residents Monday will be asked to donate blood on "Save a Life Day" Monday.

Sponsored by the hospital, community "Save a Life Day" will be held from 2 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. in the hospital conference room. Appointments are necessary and can be arranged by calling (213) 331-8266.

Donors may credit their blood donations with the Red Cross as a personal donation, as a replacement for a patient anywhere in the United States or to their individual blood bank.

"The need for blood is critical this time of year," said Alyce Steege, blood bank coordinator. "Patients at Inter-Community use an average of 1,000 to 1,500 units of blood each year. Careful accounting assures there will be sufficient blood available, when needed for medical-surgical patients and for unexpected emergencies."

The Monday program coincides with the hospital's blood donor station which is open every Monday.

In a cooperative effort with the Red Cross to increase volunteer blood availability, Inter-Community established the satellite blood donor station last March. To date, over 1,100 units of blood have been donated by patient visitors, employees and friends of the hospital.

Oil in way of dig for water

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Striking oil is usually a cause for celebration, but to the well-digging crew at the Patio Mexican Foods plant, finding the black gold was little more than an annoyance.

In fact, the crew hit oil, albeit a poor grade, five times before they finally found the water they were drilling for 1,400 feet underground.

"I was beginning to wonder if we'd ever find the water we needed with all that oil getting in the way," said plant manager Ralph Cornwell. "But now we have our own water well and it looks like we may even have a 30-year supply."

The Press and the American Revolution

The British evacuate Boston

By DR. FRANCIS G. WALETT
Worcester State College

To divert attention from his real plan, General Washington ordered a bombardment of British outposts. The enemy responded with heavy fire. After these preliminaries, General John Thomas led American forces to fortify Dorchester Heights on the evening of March 4, 1776. If they were successful in occupying this strategic location (overlooking Boston from the south), the Patriots might bring on the general engagement that Washington wanted, or force General Sir William Howe to evacuate the city.

More than 300 carts loaded with bundles of wood, barrels loaded with sand, wooden frames, picks and shovels were hauled to the heights. There the men, eager for action after the long winter, worked "with the utmost spirit" in driving stakes and picking against the frozen ground (the frost was still a foot and half deep). Despite great difficulties forts were built on the two main hills of Dorchester that night, and in the morning the surprised British saw something that must have reminded them of Bunker Hill.

The situation was serious for the British. Howe immediately held a council of war in which Admiral Shuldham told him that the fleet could not remain in the harbor under the colonial guns on Dorchester Heights. It was also plain that the redcoats were not safe in Boston under these circumstances. Something had to be done, but Howe couldn't bear the thought of fleeing from the rebels. He therefore made plans for an attack on the American position.

As many looked on expecting to see another bloody battle, fortune smiled sweetly on the colonials. A strong wind storm arose suddenly and there was a torrential downpour of rain. One observer called it a "Hurrycane." Without doubt the bad weather helped the Americans and delayed the British assault. Fortifications were strengthened and more of the heavy artillery that Henry Knox had brought down from Ticonderoga were set in place.

In fact, however, some British officers were so impressed by the strength of the colonial breastworks that they feared an attack might fail. While the storm raged General Howe and his staff reconsidered the situation. Perhaps Howe used bad weather as an excuse for not attacking the Americans at once, but one thing is certain, by the time the storm had abated, the colonila position on Dorchester Heights had been so improved as to be virtually impregnable. On March 7, 1776 General Howe decided to evacuate Boston. Washington agreed to allow the British to leve without interference, and Howe agreed not to burn the town.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL GAZETTE of New York reported gleefully on March 23 of the decision of "King George's plundering, murdering army" to leave Boston. After the truce had been agreed upon, it was noted, however, that the British were "very busy in shipping their effects on board the transports . . . it was reported that they were plundering the town, breaking and destroying everything they cannot carry away."

During the siege Boston had been very crowded with all the soldiers and the numerous Tories who had fled there for British protection. It was hard for both civilians and soldiers to be cooped up in the city with hostile forces all about. As early as the summer of 1775 food shortages were felt. John Andrews, a Patriot who remained in Boston to try and protect his property, wrote, "Was it not for a trifle of salt provisions that we have 'twould be impossible for us to live. Pork and beans one day, and beans and pork another."

Try as he did, General Howe could not find adequate provisions for his men, let alone the townspeople and refugees. Raids among the islands and along the shores of New England provided some fresh meat, but not enough. Nor were the supplies brought in by British ships that weathered the north Atlantic storms and escaped capture by American privateers sufficient. One writer commented, "Neither vegetables, flour nor pulse for the inhabitants; and the King's stores so short, none can be spared for them."

With fuel also short, most people shivered through the winter in Boston. Efforts to bring in coal or wood by ship did not relieve the shortage very much, and inhabitants as well as soldiers cut down the few remaining trees, knocked down old housses, barns and wharves, or broke up fences and outhouses to get something to burn.

Deacon Timothy Newell of the Brattle Street Church wrote sadly in his dairy: "The spacious Old South Meeting House taken possession of by the Light Horse 17th Regiment of Dragoons . . . The pulpit, pews and seats all cut to pieces and carried off in the most savage manner as can be expressed, and destined for a riding school. The beautiful carved pew with the silk furniture of Deacon Hubbard's was taken down and carried to . . . . 's house by an officer and made a hog stye."

Not everyone in Boston suffered that winter. To relieve the monotony and provide diversion, General John Burgoyne put on several amateur theatricals in Faneuil Hall. Among the officers, who fared much better than others, gambling and cockfighting flourished; and General Howe whiled away many hours with cards and the finest wines. The British commander found other diversion with Betsy Loring, the wife of one of his officers. After giving her complacent husband various duties, Sir William amused himself in the company of blonde, vivacious Betsy.

It was not until Sunday, March 17, 1776, that the British had completed preparations to leave Boston. As General Howe departed, he took with him about 1100 Loyalists, who had to leave behind their homes and virtually all belongings. If Patriots rejoiced at this time of victory, it was surely a mournful day for the Loyalists, who often complained that King George III did not appreicate their sacrifice. As the people of Boston celebrated, they felt not the slightest sympathy for those who had left.

When General Washington entered Boston he found an enormous quantity of abandoned military supplies and equipment that would be put to good use. The American commander was congratulated on his success and given a long, flattering testimonial by the provincial government.

A report in the PENNSYLVANIA EVENING POST noted that after official ceremonies, "they proceeded to the Bunch of Grapes Tavern where an elegant dinner was provided at public expense . . ." Elsewhere the news of the evacuation of Boston brought forth numerous expressions of gratitude. And at Philadelphia the Continental Congress ordered a gold medal struck off in celebration of the victory.

Wshington knew that the British would strike again, and he wasted not time in preparing for the next assault. Already he had sent General Chrales Lee with some troops to New York to prepare for an anticipated attack there. Before long, after leaving some forces to defend Boston, Washington himself headed for the New York area.

The evacuation of Boston marked the end of the first stage of the war. That the British would resume fighting was clear, and greater ordeals for the Americans lay ahead.

Women can do home repairs

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Women are more mechanically inclined than they may realize, says a long-time professional house repair expert, Alvain Ubell of Brooklyn. He was discussing why women shy away from certain repair jobs.

"Macrame, knitting, cooking and using household utensils provide women with a digital dexterity that is a mechanical plus, although they may not be aware of it. Being mechanical is really environmental. You must be involved,' he explained.

A woman often hesitates to do something because she knows she doesn't have the background, but men often psyche themselves into being heroes doing things they aren't equipped to do. He will do something to show he isn't afraid, but actually he should be, Ubell contends.

In his 25 years in the construction business, as a house inspector conducting 1,500 or so inspections a year, and as a lecturer and author, Ubell has found that the biggest fears of do-it-yourselfers concern electricity.

"Anyone who works on electricity must have a basic understanding of what he is doing. But once you understand what you are doing you will have enough confidence to do a job knowing that you are not going to get hurt. The most important consideration is learning how to do it."

Homemakers are also concerned with problems involving contractors, he has learned at his lectures. People want to know all about how to deal with house contractors, heating problems, how a house ticks generally, he says.

In his book, "Recipes for Home Repairs," written with Sam Bittman, he has tried to provide directions for every conceivable house ailment within the scope of the do-it-yourselfer's talents. If you can follow recipes in a cookbook, you can understand how to follow the home repair recipes, he insists.

More than a hundred repair formulas include those for sticking windows, squeaky floors, foundation cracks, brick work, condensation on cold water pipes, door buzzers, cracked floor tiles. In his opinion the most important information in the book is his flush valve diagnostic chart. This provides symptom, diagnosis and cure.

Some repairs may be of special interest to women — for example, how to remove a broken light bulb, always a ticklish problem. The first step requires turning off the electricity. The broken bulb is grasped with a folded newspaper and removed. If nothing is left of the bulb, a 6 to 8-inch piece of wood, onehalf-inch square, may be used. After carving a point at the end of it with a pocketknife, the stick is inserted into the broken bulb and wedged there by tapping it with a blunt edge of a hammer. When the stick is secure, it should be turned counterclockwise to remove what remains of the bulb.

In using the cookbook setup, the repairs have been assembled with a list of utensils and ingredients, a step-by-step solution and the average time it should take to do the project. Rattling windows should be quieted in 30 to 45 minutes, a torn screen might be repaired in 15 minutes, but hanging a heavy picture frame or mirror could take 75 minutes, the book points out.

Squeak in a floor? Years of squeakiness could be ended in 30 minutes, if you are lucky. Equip yourself with a flat, thin chisel, a hammer, broom, vacuum cleaner and talcum powder. It's a job that can be done by a homemaker who hasn't yet learned to use a lot of fancy tools.

Locate the source of the squeak, then open the tight floorboards slightly by inserting the chisel into a crack, tapping it with a hammer and moving the chisel lightly from side to side. Sprinkle talcum powder into the cracks. A few taps on the floor will shake the powder into the joints. Sweep powder over squeaky area with a broom. Vacuum excess powder but do not remove too much from cracks.

The procedures in the book have been tested successfully by men and women "who have never soldered, sawed, plastered or planed," say the authors.

Singing together can add joy to the family

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — This Christmas Eve, in many homes around the country, families will put finishing touches to their tree decorating and gather around the piano for carol singing.

The American Music Conference here has found this traditional custom strongly returning to favor.

You may want to prepare younger children for the caroling by encouraging them to sing along to carol records or to carols on the radio while they play rhythm sticks or small drums.

Educators say that youngsters who are reticent about singing find it much easier when they can accompany themselves on an instrument.

If you are planning a tree-trimming party for family and friends, have the preschoolers plan a dramatic interpretation of a simple carol such as "Jingle Bells," "Frosty the Snowman" or "Away in a Manger."

If your children are studying music in school, they may want to sing one of the carols they are learning in the classroom accompanied by the instrument they are studying.

Let the youngsters take turns leading the whole group in their favorite song or serving as accompanist for the other singers.

Another effective way to involve children in holiday caroling is to use round songs such as "Twelve Days of Christmas" with everyone adding a verse.

If your guests include amateur musicians, ask them to bring their instruments along.

The joy of music at Christmas is well expressed in these words from the traditional French carol, "Pat-A-Pan":

"Willie, get your little drum,
"Robin, bring your flute, and come.
"Aren't they fun to play upon?
"Turelurelu, pat-a-pat-a-pan.
"When you play your fife and drum,
"How can anyone be glum?"

State's prison and parole mess

By STATE SEN. H. L. (BILL) RICHARDSON
AND TONY CIMARUSTI

The problem of what to do with criminals has bedeviled virtually every civilization in known history.

The extremes have run from those who have advocated extermination of criminals to contemporary social theorists who blame everybody but the criminal for criminal acts. "Society" is blamed while the felon is pampered.

While mankind has advanced technologically in the last three decades, he has gone backward in the control of the criminal element.

Violent crime is on an upward spiral in this country and in California. Countless statistics could be cited to prove that statement, but most of you are familiar with this fact.

Sometimes we get too caught up in statistical games, and numbers become too impersonal.

Of much more concern is the victim of each of those crimes, rather than mere statistics, as important as they are at times.

When people think of the criminal justice system, they usually think of the police and the courts. If the police and the courts do their jobs properly, and we believe most try very hard to do just that, they play vital roles in helping to keep crime under control.

But there is a very important part of the criminal justice system about which most law-abiding citizens are unaware . . . prisons and parole.

In this series of articles, we will discuss the vital role played by the people who run the state's prison and parole systems.

These organizations include the Adult Authority (Parole Board), the Department of Corrections (adult prison system) and the Youth Authority.

We think you will be able to see that even if the police and courts are doing their jobs, permissive prison and parole theorists can subvert the system. They help create a dangerous climate for crime by releasing some of the most vicious criminals to prey upon the citizens of our state. That's what is happening today.

It comes home even more vividly because of recent incidents in this valley, where brutal murders by parolees have occurred this year.

To fully understand what's happening now in California, let's examine the history of the state's prison and parole system.

Scandal has been a part of the California prison operation since it began at Punta de Quentin on San Francisco Bay.

Conditions may not be what we'd like today, but they are angelic compared to the conditions that existed in those years when California became a state.

In his book, "Chronicles of San Quentin," Kenneth Lamott indicates that 4,000 persons were murdered between 1849 and 1855 in the San Francisco area.

The prosecuting attorney of San Francisco said in 1855, during a murder trial, that there had been 1,200 murders within the city in four years — with only one conviction.

Even apologists for criminals might consider five murders in every six days excessive for a city with a population of 45,000 people.

As expected, the people began clamping down on crime. Soon two private citizens contracted with the state to build and oerate the first prison at Punta de Quentin.

Tney were prepared to handle the entire matter for the state, asking in return that they be permitted to use convict labor in any way they wished.

County jails had been used to house state prisoners, but on Dec. 3, 1851, Gov. John McDougal placed a newspaper ad directing sheriffs to turn such inmates over to the state prison.

An early memo from State Prison Commissioners, Punta de Quentin somehow was sanctified, and it has since been called San Quentin.

Prison scandals first erupted in 1855 and almost like clockwork they had continued to do so about every 20 years.

Problems included frequent escapces, endemic drunkenness and housekeeping arrangements that included women convicts.

Certain reforms were instituted, leading to the elimination of the private contract method of operating in 1879.

Official unrest continued for a number of years, however, and then on July 15, 1880, Folsom Prison opened on the banks of the American River.

During 1880, 200 prisoners were transferred from San Quentin to Folsom. Both prisons remain operational today and they are still tough places to serve time, even though they are not the brutal places they were many years ago.

Women prisoners, generally, murderers, were housed in a prison within a prison at San Quentin for 70 years. In 1924, a building dubbed the "Hen-House" was planned, and it was completed in 1927. Women were housed there until the fall of 1933, when they were moved to a cottage-type facility at Tehachapi.

Like Folsom, Tehachapi was operated as an arm of San Quentin, but in 1937 it was separated and its name was changed to the California Institution for Women.

After the 1952 earthquake hit Kern County, the women were moved to Frontera near Chino, where they are still housed in cottage-type facilities.

The prison system continued to grow as the state's population continued upward.

Parole, which means a man or woman is put on the street under certain restrictive conditions to serve out part of a sentence, was instituted in 1893.

NEXT: How the parole system was instituted and soon was subverted.

Victim of TB worked in lab to help others

PIERRE, S.D. (AP) — Xenia Campbell has just retired from a job that has meant nearly a lifetime of work with the disease that kept her bedridden for 12 years.

Mrs. Campbell entered a tuberculosis sanatorium near Custer, S.D., as a teen-ager in 1927, at a time when the only known cures for the disease were rest or surgery.

Her personal fight was won after 12 years in a hospital bed and after surgery that collapsed one lung. After she recovered, her doctor encouraged her to work in the laboratory at the sanatorium.

"I wanted to be a nurse, but he told me I wasn't strong enough," she said. "But there was an opening in the lab, so I took that."

She met her husband at the sanatorium and they worked in the lab as a team until his death. When the sanatorium closed in 1963, Mrs. Campbell moved to Pierre and has worked in the state health lab for 12 years, analyzing bacteria samples sent by physicians and hospitals.

Mrs. Campbell said she plans to continue an active life when she retires.

"I'll probably miss the work, but I'm not very strong.

"And it should be handled by young people who can keep up with the latest information and continue their schooling," she said.

With tears in her eyes, she said, "I'm just thankful the Lord gave me the chance to do something that I have enjoyed so much."

Black dolls very popular

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lou Smith's toys come off the assembly line with a mission: to help people live together better.

Smith, president of Shindana Toys — the world's largest manufacturer of black dolls and games, says half of the firm's doll production is bought by white parents.

"More and more people are exposing their kids to black dolls," said Smith. "And they'll tell you point-blank: 'I don't want my kid to come up with some of the hangups I grew up with.'"

Shindana (a Swahili word meaning competitor) is a division of Operation Bootstrap, Inc., a nonprofit self-help community organization Smith helped found in south central Los Angeles after the 1965 Watts riot. The seven-year-old company, which had sales of $1.4 million in 1975 and expects to do $1.6 million next year, sells nationwide and recently began distribution in the African nations of Kenya, Tanzania, Uganda and Zanzibar.

"We're turning our dream into a reality," said Smith, 46. "We've shown that black businesses can be successful in what is still largely a white man's business world."

Shindana began in 1968 with a single black doll, Baby Nancy, the first doll to be made with black facial features instead of white features painted black. Today the company markets a line of 25 dolls and six blackoriented games and puzzles. They include an Afro-American history game, a science fiction adventure game featuring a character called "Captain Soul" and another for children based on "The Jackson Five" singing group.

Smith thinks toys — particularly dolls — are vital to the self-images that children develop.

"We believe that only by learning to love oneself can one learn to love others," he said. "Shindana believes that by marketing black dolls and games that both black and white children can learn to relate to at an early age, the company can foster the spirit of what Shindana is all about — love."

Shindana received its initial capital and technical assistance from Mattel, Inc., and Smith says the giant toymaker in suburban Hawthorne has helped the fledgling firm all along the way.

"Mattel did things for us that no government aid could do," Smith explained. "We'd come up

ARTISTRY — Winter has begun her artistry, painting these branches with ice along the beach at Pt. Stanley, Ont. The lighthouse stands guard at the end of the pier as the morning sun sparkles off the water.

Even jungle hit by inflation

KARAWALA, Nicaragua (AP) — Inflation, that demon of the modern world, is stalking the jungle — and sending Nicaraguan Indians back to their simpler past.

The Sumo Indians now hunt with a poison extracted from frogs, rather than with expensive bullets. And they considered forsaking pants in favor of loin cloths. The white man's world is just too expensive.

It seems what they sell to the outside world hasn't gone up, while what they might buy from the outside world has exploded in price. It's enough to drive anyone back to the jungle.

Bill Lanford, a white man who lives on the edge of the jungle along Nicaragua's Caribbean coast, explains that Sumos earn only a dollar per linear foot for the alligator skins they sell, the same price they've been paid for years.

But the cost of bullets to kill the alligators has doubled.

In Karawala Lanford lives with about 400 Indians who get by with a little fishing, raising pigs, rounding up wild cattle and tending a few acres of rice and beans.

The Indians adopted the white man's dress in the 1930s when a long-gone lumber mill set up business near the village. But the cost of a pair of pants has gone up sharply in the past two years while cash paid for the Indians' cows, pigs and chickens remains the same.

Several months ago the Indians held a council to decide if they should shun the white man's goods and dress, start wearing loin cloths again and return to the jungle.

"They decided they had lived like the white man for too many years and had forgotten how to take care of themselves in the jungle," Lanford said in an interview in his cane-and-grass hut on the edge of the village.

Lanford, a 28-year old University of Texas graduate who majored in biology, also is grappling with inflation as he hacks a hole out of the edge of the jungle for a tarpon fishing camp. The cost of nails, screen wire, mosquito netting and other necessities has increased up to 50 per cent in the past two years, he said.

Karawala lies along Karawala Creek at a point just before the clear water empties into the Rio Grande, a river that winds down out of the Nicaraguan mountains and with an idea for a new product and they've made just about everything over the years, so we'd check it out with them."

Shindana has had rough going despite Mattel's help, Smith said, and the company still faces major problems, including the lack of an advertising budget, trouble getting loans and reluctance on the part of some distributors to handle the black toys. The firm turned a $250,000 profit in 1972 on the strength of a Flip Wilson talking doll featuring the entertainer's "Geraldine" character but even that proved harmful.

"It was the worst thing that ever happened to us," Smith said. "We didn't have enough business experience and we structured our overhead to do the same kind of business the next year and the bottom fell out. The toy business is very fickle and we had already used up half that overhead before we realized what had happened to us."

Smith credits the dedication of the 70 employes at the firm's south central Los Angeles plant with keeping the company alive.

"Everybody understands the need to make the business work," he said. "We're kind of like pioneers and we need to succeed not only for the business' sake but also for image's sake."

Smith, a former civil rights worker and was one of the "freedom riders" who integrated public bus systems in the South during the 1960s, believes Shindana provides an inspiration for ghetto youths.

"The kids out on the street need to see Shindana Toys because their business options are few ... pimping, pushing and so on," he explained. "We tell them, 'You can go out there and sell heroin if you want to, but look what happened to your partners. They spent all the money they made trying to ward off the long jail sentences they got and we're still out here making it.'"

Smith expects 1976 to be Shindana's biggest year. The company has just signed a contract with O.J. Simpson, star running back of the Buffalo Bills, to produce an O.J. Simpson doll.

"We had a major weakness in our doll line," said Smith. "Historically, boy dolls have been soldiers but we refuse to make war toys. There's enough violence in our community now. So we got ahold of O.J. and we developed a doll that comes with shoulder pads, cleats ... the whole shot. We know that's going to be a winner."

Rug care

Sometime between now and your holiday preparations — or at least as a New Year's resolution — is the time to put into practice the advice that it's easier to shampoo a rug succesfully if you don't let it become too soiled.

"You may need to clean more often," says Leslie Wood, consumer information specialist for Johnson Wax, "but you'll find it easier in the long run."

She suggests a spray foam rug and carpet cleaner such as Professional Strength Glory that can be used to shampoo traffic areas more frequently and remove spots as they occur.

"Before you do the entire carpet," she added, "treat spots first to be sure you are rid of them. And always try out a generally unseen part of your rug or carpet to be sure of its colorfastness."

For those of you who don't care to move a room full of furniture around, Miss Wood recommends covering furniture feet with plastic bags or aluminum foil while carpeting is drying.

Christmas meeting scheduled

Star of the West Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, will observe Christmas Night at the first meeting for the 1976 officers at 8 p.m., Monday in the Pomona Masonic Temple.

Mrs. Elida Bashore and her committee will be in charge of the social hour following the meeting.

In lieu of a gift exchange, monetary gifts will go to the J. Clifford Lee Cancer Fund.

Pre holiday

Now's just the time to get all your kitchen surfaces and appliances clean for the heavy-use holiday season, says Leslie Wood, consumer information specialist for Johnson Wax.

"Today, clean means not just getting rid of cooking grease, grime and fingerprints," Miss Wood noted. "It means putting down a fresh coat of stain resistant wax at the same time."

Miss Wood suggests that you try either a liquid or spray such as Jubilee, that will put a through-the-holiday shine on formica, tile and even enamel.

Warm relief

An unusual treatment for migraine headaches has been suggested by a Denver psychiatrist. The doctor tells patients to get under a hair dryer. As reported in American Family Physician, the warmth and humming noise of the dryer are believed to provide a sense of relaxation and have brought relief to two-thirds of the psychiatrist's migraine patients.

Tree decorations—a family project

Of the many holidays Americans observe, Christmas is the most family-oriented. And the joyful task of decorating the Christmas tree is one that everyone enjoys especially when each one can make a personal contribution.

From simple paper chains which the youngest member of the family can make to the more intricate ornaments, handmade decorations add a special mood to your tree that are a true reflection of your family and the holiday's celebration.

To get your imagination going, here are several suggestions for easy to make ornaments.

Personalize ornaments by using photos of your family and friends.

Start with a styrofoam ball. Cut out the portion of the picture you plan to use. Since torn edges fit the ball better, tear ragged edges around the photo before gluing to ball. Cover the rest of the ornament with torn bits of tissue, foil or colorful wrapping paper. Brush with clear plastic to coat the decoration.

Trim with velvet ribbon, chubby yarns or gold braid and bows. Attach a loop for the hanger with a straight pin, imbedded below the surface of the ball.

You might want to vary these ornaments with scenes from Christmas cards or holiday wrapping paper.

Another attractive decoration is a cone ball. You can use one color, several colors patterned papers or two tones of paper glued together to give a multi-color effect.

To make this ornament, cut only about 16 circles. Cut them in half. Using the straight edge as the base, form a cone. Secure the ends with double-faced tape or glue. Take a piece of string and make a knot in one end. Draw the string through the center of one cone to form the hanger.

Complete the rest of the cones and with glue or double-faced tape, join them, row upon row, until a layered ball is formed.

Hang the ornament as is or add sparkle by covering the edges lightly with white glue and dipping into glitter.

The size of the circles will determine the size of your ornaments. Mix colors, sizes and patterns for a colorful look for your tree.

You might also want to combine the balls with other ornaments shaped like candy canes, angles, snowflakes, candles, partridges or other birds, poinsettias or even your own pets.

Cut the desired shapes from cardboard, outline the shapes with ribbons and yarns. Add detailing with bits of colorful wrapping papers, glitter or sequins.

Add a hanger and place on the tree. Mix with strings of popcorn, cranberries, paper chains or tinsel.

You can probably think of additional variations of these basic ornaments, involve the whole family in the tree trimming and create a tree that will be a truly unique family expression for this year's Christmas observance.

"20 YEAR RE-OCCURING ULCER GONE"

says Richard Taylor, truck driver, "I was so sick I couldn't eat, and lost 56 lbs. My ulcer would clear up a month or two and then return. No doctor could help me until I took Dr. Wing's treatment. After two weeks, I felt much better. In a short time later I quit and haven't taken any medication and eat anything I want and have gained back to 200 lbs. Truck driving is hard on my nerves but my stomach hasn't bothered me the last 2 years."

Kate and the Duke

Superstars glowing

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — One of this year's — any year's — most intriguing castings is that in Hal Wallis' film, "Rooster Cogburn." It costars John Wayne and Katharine Hepburn, which, on the surface, is something like putting Anwar Sadat and Yitzhak Rabin in a remake of "What Price Glory."

Wallis admits he approached the project with galloping trepidation, but he says it worked out fine.

"The chemistry worked," says the 76-year-old producer. "They got along very well. Neither of them is too easy to get along with, but somehow they hit it off. Actually, what happened was that he did anything she wanted him to do."

Wallis says Duke Wayne was anxious to do a sequel to "True Grit," because he loved old Rooster and wanted to play the part again.

"Usually Duke wants a script finished first," Wallis says, "but this time I just had an outline. The girl's part had developed, and it was a good part, so I called Kate on a long shot. I said I have something that might appeal to you.

"I sent her the outline. She said she wasn't sure if it was enough, she couldn't tell if her part would measure up or be just what she called a 'feeder' part — feeding lines to Wayne. But I had a first draft written and she read that and then she became very enthusiastic.

There remained the ticklish business of the two big stars meeting, each other, and deciding if they wanted to work together. Wallis accomplished that Major Event in London. Kate was working there on the TV special, "Love Among the Ruins," and Duke was there shooting "Branningan." The two had never met before.

"He was shooting a scene on Piccadilly Circus," Wallis says. "I took Kate over to meet him. She grabbed his arm. He turned around, saw who it was, gave her a big grin. Then he picked her up and twirled her around. That was that.

NO FIREWORKS — Cast and crew anticipated a lot of sparks when John Wayne and Katharine Hepburn were co-starred in "Rooster Cogburn," but the fireworks never came. The two superstars got along like Raggedy Ann and Raggedy Andy.

Philip Culbertson

Former Pomona artist honored

Friends of the Palm Springs Library were so impressed with the stainless steel sculptures of former Pomonan Philip Culbertson that they commissioned him to create a design for the new library in the desert city.

The library was dedicated earlier this month with educator S. I. Hayakawa as speaker. Culbertson's sculpture drew audience acclaim at the ceremony, according to a spokesman.

The 7-foot tall stainless steel design still stands on a temporary base in the patio of the newly completed library. It was paid for by donations from the Friends and other patrons of the library.

Culbertson will also have a 12-foot sculpture on exhibit in the Frank Sinatra sculpture court of the new Palm Springs Art Gallery

Culbertson, his wife, Dorothy and son, David, resided in Pomona from 1948 until just a few years ago when they moved to the desert community to open an art gallery.

At first, Culbertson just casually exhibited his sculptures which had started as a hobby, in the gallery along with works of nationally recognized artists.

His work drew quick response and, in the last few years, has been purchased by collectors and businessmen across the nation. Some 30 sculptures, ranging from desk-top size to giant garden pieces, are in homes, law firms and commercial businesses in many cities across the country.

Culbertson became interested in stainless steel design during World War II. After flying 95 missions in combat as an Army Air Force pilot, he was sent to a rest and recreation center where he first came into contact with the art.

He continued his interest and study during the years he served with the Los Angeles County Forest and Fire Department before his retirement in 1970.

In the past, many of Culbertson's works were given to friends or used by his wife in her interior design business.

Mrs. Culbertson has been the producer of the Interior Design Show at the Los Angeles County Fair for nine years.

Levine to lead Philharmonic

James Levine, principal conductor of the Metropolitan Opera, will lead the Los Angeles Philharmonic in concerts at the Pavilion of the Los Angeles Music Center at 8:30 p.m. Thursday, 1:30 p.m. Friday and 2:30 p.m. next Sunday.

Soloist at the three concerts will be pianist Paul Schenly, who will perform Beethoven's Concerto No. 2. The program will also include Sibelius' Symphony No. 2 and Webern's Six Pieces for Orchestra.

Pianist John Browning will present the Philharmonic's second Celebrity Recital of the season in the Pavilion at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday. He replaces Andre Watts who is indisposed. Browning is a former pupil of concert pianist Lee Pattison who taught at Scripps College.

Getty Museum plans Rodin exhibition

"Rodin's Rodin," a collection of bronzes, plasters and watercolors by French artist Auguste Rodin, will open Tuesday at the J. Paul Getty Museum in Malibu. It continues through Jan. 28.

The exhibit, on loan from the Maryhill Museum of Fine Arts in Washington, D.C., is uniquely "Rodin's Rodin" because most of the pieces on display were gifts from Rodin to his friends.

"Unlike art works purchased by collectors, the items in this exhibit reflect Rodin's personal taste and, perhaps, can give us a glimpse into his genius," Dr. Jiri Frel, the Museum's Curator of Antiquities, said.

The exhibit is particularly interesting when viewed in conjunction with the Getty collection of classical Greek sculpture because Rodin used the basic principles of sculpture established by the Greeks.

Often called the father of modern sculpture, Rodin would sometimes separate hands, feet, arms and even heads from finished figures and then transfer these pieces to other torsos or isolate the fragments, giving them a meaning of their own.

The exhibit includes a stock of Rodin's spare legs and feet, as well as finished versions of some of his most famous works, such as "The Thinker," "Eve" and "The Age of Bronze."

There is no charge for the exhibit, but advance reservations are recommended for guaranteed parking and admission into the museum. Reservations may be requested by writing to the museum's reservation office or telephoning (213) 454-6541. The museum, at 17985 Pacific Coast Highway, is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

Blue chips rally; market sluggish

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Blue chip stocks rallied from their early-December slide this past week, but the rest of the market continued to languish amid a wide range of economic uncertainties.

The Dow Jones industrial average, made up of 30 blue-chip industrials, climbed 14.01 to 832.81 after a 41.87-point drubbing the week before.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 1.01 to 87.83, and the New York Stock Exchange composite index gained .42 to 46.26.

But the over-all count on the NYSE showed 931 losers against only 798 gainers among the 2,051 issues traded.

And Big Board volume slacked off to a daily average of 14.85 million shares from 17.15 million in the previous week.

Brokers said the market benefited from bargain hunting by investors attracted by the sharply lower prices that resulted from the selloff at the start of the month.

But they noted that the concentration of buying in the highest-grade stocks betrayed a continuing atmosphere of caution.

Analysts listed several unresolved questions and issues facing the market:

—Uncertainty over whether the economic recovery might be losing the vigor it showed in the late summer and early fall.

—Doubts about the outlook for interest rates.

—An absence of agreement between Congress and the White House, at least through the market's close Friday, on legislation to extend this year's tax cuts into 1976.

Another apparent contributor to the market's split-personality showing was the tax selling and reinvestment which often obscure the underlying trend in investors' feelings at this time of year.

Both bulls and bears were able to find evidence to support their views of the progress of the economic recovery.

On the bright side, there were figures from the Commerce Department showing a sharp improvement in retail sales for November and early December from their levels a year ago.

Consumer demand, in a widely held view on Wall Street, holds the key to how well the economy's recovery attempt will fare in the immediate future.

But the pessimists continued to point to the declines that showed up in the government's index of leading economic indicators in September and October — the last two months for which the index has been calculated.

The University of Michigan, in its latest survey of consumer sentiment issued late the week, found that the pickup in confidence that had been registered earlier in the year had come to a halt.

The Federal Reserve's weekly statistics, meanwhile, showed a big jump in the nation's money supply to a record high.

That news seemed to cast a cloud over the interest rate outlook because it raised concern that the Fed might sooner or later feel the need to tighten credit to keep the economy from heating up at a rate it would consider inflationary.

Texaco was the week's most active issue, dipping 3/8 to 22 7/8.

General Motors, which forecast a rise of about 19 per cent in auto industry sales next year, climbed 3 5/8 to 56 5/8.

Also gaining were such other big-name issues as American Telephone & Telegraph, up 5/8 at 50; IBM, ahead 1 at 215 5/8, and Eastman Kodak, 3/4 higher at 102 3/4.

Avon Products dropped 1 3/8 to 35 1/4. The stock fell as low as 33 before the company called off a planned acquisition which investors found not at all to their liking.

Avon shares fell some 8 points in a few days after the company announced its plan to diversify into insurance by acquiring Monarch Capital Corp.

Negative New Yorker image traced to public relations

NEW YORK (AP) — Are New Yorkers really "inhospitable, standoffish, rude, pushy, superior, lazy, irresponsible, crooked and violent?"

That's their "undeserved reputation," says Manhattan public relations executive Peter L. Rothholz, because the state doesn't spend enough money to let tourists "get to know us better."

Rothholz and other tourist industry spokesman testified Wednesday before a state legislative subcommittee on tourism.

Tourism is New York State's second largest industry and produces $4.3 billion a year in direct income for the state, but the state in return provides only $1.2 million annually in promotion funds, they complained.

"In terms of total funds, New York ranks 17th among the states in promoting tourism," said Charles Gillett, president of the city's Convention and Visitors Bureau. "At seven cents per person," it ranks 49th in per capita spending.

New York has the "dubious distinction of being the only state in the East not to have state-operated highway information centers," charged Nat Oppenheim, president of the Adirondack Park Association.

Rothholz suggested a volunteer corps of multilingual New Yorkers to man information booths for tourists.

Inflation even hits jungle...

jungle and flows into the blue Caribbean.

Both Sumo and Mozkito Indians inhabit the village, but the majority of the Sumo tribe remains in the jungle where its people hunt the alligator, the jaguar, the wild boar.

The Mozkitos were traders and fishermen who lived along the coast 400 years ago when the English used the rivers for bases to strike out at Spanish ships.

Today the village is accessible only from the ocean or by bush plane. But the half-mile grass airstrip presents some problems. The Indian children have built a baseball field on it.

Karawala's Indians live in unpainted houses, wear light cotton clothing and wide smiles. Cows run wild on the nearby savannah, and whoever can catch them can sell them to the captains of trading boats that come up and down the Rio Grande once or twice a month.

The merchant Edmundo Chou is the town's rich man. The shack that serves as his store has the only refrigerator in the village. The ancient, rusting, kerosene-powered heat-transfer appliance is stocked with cold beer, but only after the boat comes in.

The village is becoming increasingly dependent on fisherman Lanford, who gives away the 175-to 200-pound tarpon and smaller fish he catches from a 30-foot open boat powered by an outboard motor. The Indians cannot afford gasoline, which traders sell for a dollar a gallon, and find it risky to go after the big fish in small dugout canoes.

Lanford lives as the Indians do, eating fish, wild fruit like coconuts, pineapples, oranges, papayas, berries and bananas that bound in the area. Sometimes there is monkey meat and parrots.

He remembers inflation in the outside world. But he finds it especially cruel here.

"Inflation is a danger these people have trouble dealing with," he says. "They endure disease, accidents and storms because they come and go. But inflation is something that keeps hanging on."

Pomona's crime rate just reflects trend . .

When the youth in the families move to the suburbs, they bring their gangs with them, he added.

"Many of the recent murders in the valley have been gang-related," said Humphreys. "And now these gangs fight with guns. There have always been gang fights but the tools used to be knives, chains and fists.

"Now, it seems, to be considered 'a real man' you must own a gun," said the professor. He added that it is a peer-oriented fad to possess a gun.

"In addition to the fact that guns 'are in' is the availability of hand guns to almost anyone," he continued. They are now 100 million firearms—or one for every two Americans now in circulation. "Manufactures should be required to account for every gun they make and sell and the acquisition of hand guns should be strictly regulated," Humphrey added.

But, he admitted, this would not be the complete solution. As in the days of prohibition when bathtub gin was always available, there are many who would turn to the making of "home-brew guns."

"Juveniles who use a gun in the commission of a crime should be treated as an adult by the law," said Humphreys.

"Now the young criminal knows he will get off lightly. In fact, a brief stay in juvenile detention merely increases his standing among his gang."

But youths aren't the only ones committing murder, added the professor.

"Twenty-five per cent of next year's victims will be killed by a spouse or relative and another 25 per cent by a neighbor or other acquaintance," he said.

Humphreys added that he used to counsel young couples and would tell them "take a look at the person you are about to marry. That person may become your killer."

While criminologists can't predict who will be killed or when and where, they can pretty well outline the trends, said Humphreys.

"And just as we can't tell who will be murdered, the police can't prevent such crimes," he added. "In property crimes, the police can do a great deal to reduce the rates, but in homicides, officers are helpless."

The professor does not recommend a person arming himself as a means of personal protection. He said many persons are killed with their own guns.

What may happen, Humphreys believes is that wealthier families will copy the trend, now followed in Latin American nations and the Philippines, of moving behind guarded walls.

Many such communities are being established across the nation, he added

While he is not optimistic about the future—at least as long as the unemployment rate is the same—Humphreys does offer some suggestions.

He recommends that parents seek counseling when they suspect that their youngsters are having problems. Also, he said, parents need to better supervise their children and be more aware of their activities and their associates

West End to wind up charity campaign

The West End United Way will hold its 1975-76 campaign victory luncheon Wednesday noon at Villa Guasti.

The meeting will cap a three-month drive to raise $550,599 for the 35 agencies funded through the West End United Way, according to Ralph Stillings, executive director.

All campaign chairmen, workers and others involved are invited to attend and hear the final tally of contributions, pledges and payroll deductions they worked to secure for the benefit of West End residents, Stillings said.

In addition to the announcement of the final campaign figure, the luncheon will feature entertainment, prizes and awards for outstanding performance.

On hand to make the presentations will be Judy Harbst, Ms. United Way and her court.

Reservations for the luncheon at Villa Gusti, on Brookside Road near Archibald Avenue, may be obtained at $5.50 each by calling the West End United Way office, 309 N. Euclid Ave., Ontario, 984-1797.

Collegians to train in Pomona schools

Some 18 UCLA students enrolled in extension courses taught at the Parnell Ranch in South Pomona now are being given in-service training for entering special education classrooms as instructional aides in Pomona's public schools in January.

These upper-division students will assist in 13 classrooms where some 195 physically and mentally handicapped boys and girls are enrolled. They will stay in the classrooms through March.

According to Mrs. Rubylee C. Gracy, coordinator of special education, it is a worthwhile program for two reasons. First it offers valuable work experience to the college students as field service. Second, it will be of great value to the special education students who, in many cases, will have a one-to-one learning experience in the classroom.

GETTING AWAY—FOR AWHILE

Trader Veeck is back in business

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — A few days ago, Chicago White Sox fans didn't know whether they would have a team to cheer for in 1976. Now, they shouldn't have trouble keeping the kids who sell scorecards busy.

They can thank new owner Bill Veeck for keeping the team in Chicago and for the club's face lifting.

On a night in which Detroit left-hander Mickey Lolich wound up with the New York Mets in a trade for Rusty Staub, Veeck's flurry of deals just before the Friday midnight inter-league trading deadline, highlighted the windup of baseball's winter meetings.

American League owners allowed Veeck, who had been out of baseball since 1961, back in their select circle last Wednesday. He not only prevented the franchise from being moved to Seattle, he wound up with former National League batting champion Ralph Garr from Atlanta and veteran reliever Clay Carroll from Cincinnati.

He unloaded 37-year-old Jim Kaat, a 20-game winner last season, to Philadelphia and sent fading slugger Bill Melton to California.

Veeck, who conducted business from the hotel lobby Friday, completed the final trade just 15 seconds before the deadline.

Here are the deals the White Sox completed in the late hour:

—Sent outfielder Ken Henderson and pitchers Dick Ruthven and Dan Osborn to Atlanta for Garr and infielder Larvell Blanks.

—Blanks was sent to Cleveland for second baseman Jack Brohamer.

—Acquired Carroll from the world champion Cincinnati Reds for pitcher Rich Hinton and catcher Jeff Sovern, both minor leaguers.

—Gave up shortstop Bee Bee Richard to St. Louis for outfielder Buddy Bradford and pitcher Greg Terlecky.

The deal for Carroll awaited approval of the 34-year-old right-hander, who has the right to veto it since he is in the 10-year veteran, five years with the same club, category.

Lolich, 35, who had a 12-18 record and a 4.77 earned run average last season, also had the right to turn down a move to New York. At first he did, but later he relented after dogged persistance by Mets officials.

"Mickey had 13 great seasons with us and it shocked him to have to leave," said Tigers General Manager Jim Campbell. "But we needed some more runs and Staub is one who can help us get them."

Staub, 31, batted .282 with 19 home runs and 105 RBI in 1975. Also in that deal, rookie outfielder Billy Baldwin went to the Mets and pitcher Bill Laxton was shipped to Detroit.

In all, 23 deals were completed here involving 64 players.

The New York Yankees, California Angels and Atlanta Braves were among the busiest teams in the trading market. But Philadelphia Phillies Manager Danny Ozark felt that his team should be favored for the National League pennant after picking up two front-line pitchers—Kaat and right-hander Ron Reed from the St. Louis Cardinals. In return, the Phillies gave up three unproven youngsters who were not counted as regulars.

The Yankees pulled the shocker of the meetings by unloading slugging outfielder Bobby Bonds, who they had acquired a year ago from San Francisco for Bobby Murcer, to California. In return the Yanks got 16-game winner Ed Figueroa and outfielder Mickey Rivers, the American League stolen base king.

The Yankees, rebuilding their third-place Al East club, and ready to move into a refurbished Yankee Stadium, got some of the infield help they needed in Willie Randolph, a "can't miss" second baseman, and some more new faces in veteran pitchers Dock Ellis and Ken Brett. For the three, Pittsburgh received 16-game winner Doc Medich.

California went for power in the acquisition of Melton and Bonds.

"We got only 94 home runs in 26 weeks last season, but here we got 47 homers within a couple of hours," said Harry Dalton, Angels' general manager.

With Veeck back at the controls, the White Sox also got veteran first baseman Jim Spencer and young outfielder Morris Nettles from he Angels.

Houston obtained outfielder Leon Roberts, and pitchers Gene Pentz and Mike Lemongello from Detroit, and pitchers Joe McIntosh from San Diego. The Astros shipped catcher Milt May and pitchers Dave Roberts and Jim Crawford to Detroit, and sent veteran third baseman Doug Rader to San Diego.

In another deal of note, St. Louis shipped third baseman Ken Reitz to San Francisco for young southpaw Pete Falcone.

Cincinnati, the National League champion, added bench strength with outfielder Bob Bailey from Montreal and outfielder Mike Lum from Atlanta, without giving up front-liners.

Boston, the American League champion and overloaded with starting pitchers, found the reliever they wanted in Atlanta's Tom House by giving up 14-game winner Roger Moret.

While many clubs hoped they had solved their personnel problems, the owners managed to settle only one of theirs. They cleared up the White Sox' situation by awarding the franchise to Veeck.

But it left Seattle still awaiting a franchise, something it would have had if the American League had turned down Veeck. Instead Seattle is going ahead with its multimillion dollar lawsuit against the AL scheduled for Jan. 12. The suit stems from the league pulling out of Seattle after only one season, 1969, and moving the franchise to Milwaukee. Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn suggested that forebearance instead of a suit would be a better means for Seattle to get a franchise.

The fate of the San Francisco Giants remained uncertain. The NL has set a Dec. 31 deadline for arranging the sale of the financially troubled club. Indications were that the Giants would go to a local group and remain there. Baseball brass, however, steadfastly maintain that the Bay area cannot support the Giants and Oakland A's. Charles O. Finley could resolve it by moving his club to Seattle but he insists he's staying put.

The owners all went home without settling a number of other items.

—There was no action on the recommendation to change the best-of-five league championship series to a best-of-seven World Series.

—No visable indications that the basic agreement with the players association, which expires Dec. 31, is nearing settlement.

—The designated hitter remains a bone of contention with the American League pushing for its use in All-Star game and World Series. The National League did agree to allow the AL to use the DH in exhibition games at all parks.

Both leagues agreed to a second inter-league trading period in March, but the players association has to agree to it before it becomes a reality.

Poly comes home winless

FARGO, N.D. — Cal Poly completed its road trip Saturday night with a 81-76 loss to North Dakota State.

Steve Saladino of NDS scored 29 points as the Bison withstood a Bronco rally late in the second half to clinch the win. NDS had an 18-point lead with 16:42 left in the game, but the Broncos whittled that to a 76-76 standoff with two minutes left. The Bison pulled ahead on shots by Saladino and Mark Emerson, both All-North Central Conference selections last year.

Poly was led by Jack Gamulin with 22 points, Paul Newton with 15 and Joe Sills with 13.

But Saladino, the game's high scorer, also caught 10 rebounds, while teammate Bob Nagle contributed 19 points and 15 rebounds and U.S. Davidson added 16 points.

Poly made 43.5 per cent of its field goal attempts and 50 per cent of its free throws, while NDS shot 45.3 and 61.9 per cent respectively.

Poly, 2-5, absorbed all five of its losses on the road trip. The Broncs fell to some nationally known basketball teams in Houston (74-63), Texas (77-66), Louisville (84-70), North Dakota (77-67) and North Dakota State.

Coaches Don Hogan and Allen Van Winkle and the Bronco squad will arrive at Los Angeles International Airport this afternoon at 12:30.

Flyers skate by Kings with big second period

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Reggie Leach capped a three-goal second period for the Flyers with the first of his two goals as Philadelphia skated to a 6-4 National Hockey League victory over Los Angeles Saturday night.

The Flyers snapped a five-game Los Angeles winning streak to gain their first victory over the Kings this season. Philadelphia is unbeaten in its last three games.

Gary Dornhoefer broke a 1-1 deadlock at 11:29 of the second period with his 13th goal of the season to trigger the Flyers' three-goal salvo against Gary Edwards. The Flyers made it 3-1 eighteen seconds later when Dave Schultz stole the puck and scored unassisted on a 15-footer.

Leach then drilled the first of two at the 17:17 mark on a 20-foot backhand shot and opened the scoring in the final period with his 19th of the season to stretch Philadelphia's lead to 5-1.

Rick MacLeish stole a Los Angeles pass and fired from 20 feet away to give the Flyers a 6-1 advantage about four minutes later.

The Kings came to life in the last seven minutes, striking for three goals, two of them on power plays.

Frank St. Marseille, Mike Corrigan and defenseman Bob Murdoch tallied to bring the Kings to within two.

Philadelphia jumped to an early lead midway in the first period on a short-handed goal by Orest Kindrachuk, but Marcel Dionne evened things up on a Los Angeles power play at 17:03. It was Dionne's 21st goal of the season and sixth in his last three games.

DePaul stuns Louisville

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Unranked DePaul blew an early 16-point lead, then came from behind on the play of center Dave Corzine to upset previously unbeaten and sixth-ranked Louisville 78-76 in college basketball Saturday night.

Corzine, a 6-foot-11 sophomore, scored 17 points, handed out 13 assists and blocked four shots as he cut off Louisville's inside game most of the way.

Phoenix halts Laker win streak, 116-108

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Paul Westphal scored 26 points and rookie Alvan Adams had 23 to lead Phoenix to a 116-108 victory over the Los Angeles Lakers in National Basketball Association action Saturday night.

The Phoenix victory came despite a 41-point performance by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Lakers, who saw their three game winning streak snapped.

Los Angeles tied the score at 27-27 with 10:37 to go in the second quarter but were never able to take over the lead during he entire game. Phoenix built up leads of 15 and 14 points in the third and fourth quarters.

Westphal, with 15 poins, paced Phoenix to a 55-48 halftime lead although Jabbar led all first-half scorers with 19 points.

After the Lakers tied it for the first time early in the second quarter, Ricky Sobers and Westphal led a Phoenix spurt that made it 37-27 less than two minutes later.

Adams, with 12 points, boosted Phoenix to a 15-point lead at 5:13 of the third quarter before the Lakers rallied at the foul line to make it 85-75 at the horn.

Gail Goodrich finished with 23 points for the Lakers while Curtis Perry was third in the scoring column for Phoenix with 21 points.

Los Angeles Coach Bill Sharman said rebounding made the big difference.

"It seems like they came up with the rebound every time we took bad shots," said Sharman.

Regarding the NBA Pacific Division, Sharman said it's the toughest. "I think all five teams are strong. Portland right now is kind of off the track, but on paper they're good. I see a close race and key injuries could play a big part."

He praised Phoenix rookie Adams, saying right now "he is a super rookie. He does everything well. And he's very very intelligent. It seems like he's been in the league five years."

Phoenix Coach John MacLeod called it a good team effort, saying "we did much better on the board tonight."

MacLeod had high praise for Perry who grabbed 20 rebounds. Adams contributed 13 rebounds and six assists.

Jabbar added 18 rebounds and five assists to his 41-point effort.

Turnovers throughout the evening ended up with 24 for the Lakers and 17 for Phoenix.

For the evening the Lakers outshot the Suns 47 to 45 per cent.

Troy outlasts Illinois

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Southern California, with some clutch free throw shooting by Bob Trowbridge, staved off an Illinois rally in the final minutes to down the Illini 62-58 Saturday night.

With the Trojans holding a precarious 59-58 lead, Trowbridge connected on two free throws with 1:01 remaining to give USC the triumph.

Casey Jones added an insurance free throw with 14 seconds left as the Trojans ran their record to 5-1. Illinois is now 5-2.

USC had as much as a 15-point lead in the second half before a rash of turnovers and some crack shooting by the Illini gave the Trojans a scare.

Junior guard Marv Safford led the Trojans with 22 points and hit 10 of 17 shots from the floor. Trowbridge added 15 points, and Earl Evans had 10.

The Illini were hurt when their leading scorer, Rich Adams, got into foul trouble and played only 23 minutes. He had 10 points when he fouled out with 5:07 remaining.

USC led 31-24 at the half. The Trojans made only 34 per cent of their shots in the opening 20 minutes, but slowed down the tempo of the game after the intermission and worked for easy layins and short jump shots.

Bruins begin Rose Bowl preparation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — They rolled out the victory bell and UCLA's loose and lively football team cavorted for cameramen and reporters as the Bruins opened practice sessions for the 62nd annual Rose Bowl game against Ohio State.

The session was devoted more to interviews and posing for pictures than for workouts but the 11th-ranked Bruins appeared frisky and rarin' to go. And the players became cheerleaders frequently during the two-hour session.

The bell, which the Bruins won back from rival Southern Cal on Nov. 28 by winning their rivalry 25-22, was rolled out on a blue trailer. As it was rung by Coach Dick Vermeil, the players shouted and cheered.

"They've been off since the USC game and they're anxious to get back to work," said a spokesman. A number of players agreed.

"This is he first day back," said All-American quarterback John Sciarra. "Mark (Harmon) and I ran some in the last few days, but mainly we've all just been relaxing. The time off has been good, but I think we all want to get right back at it."

Harmon was the UCLA quarterback last year and still rooms with Sciarra in Westwood. Harmon is now a television color man.

"We needed the time off to relax," said halfback Wendell Tyler. "Week after week I had been playing in pain, which I don't think a lot of people knew about. The time off gave us a chance to think about things."

Tyler has had a sprained left wrist for much of the season. Saturday he showed up wearing a well-worn cast, replete with signatures wishing him well against Ohio State on New Year's Day. "I'll get this off in a couple of days and start to get the numbness out of my thunb."

Tyler, who fumbled five times against UCS, said he'll be 100 per cent for the Buckeyes. When OSU crushed UCLA earlier in the season, Tyler was the Bruins' leading rusher with 76 yards in 12 carries.

Vermeil said practice sessions would start out slowly, to permit the players to get their timing back, and he said UCLA planned no major changes for the Buckeyes except "we'll have our pads on tighter, so they'll stay on."

Wide receiver Norm Anderson, who did not play against Ohio State on Oct. 4 because of an injury, said the break from action was "good for all of us. We'd been a little banged up and this gave us the rest we needed."

Vermeil, a former assistant coach in the National Football League, was asked if the Rose Bowl could be compared to the NFL playoffs.

"Heck, no, these aren't the playoffs. This is the Super Bowl. The playoffs were the Pacific-8 Conference games. There's no game like the Rose Bowl."

Division winners are determined by best over-all record. In case of ties, winner is determined by best head-to-head record between tied teams, then by records of teams against other teams in the same division, then against teams in the same conference. In the event a tie still exists, it is broken on the basis of total points scored by both teams in their two games.

Sites for Dec. 27-28 first-round conference playoff games are determined by over-all records, with the best divisional winner in eac conference hosting that conference's wild-card team and the second-best winner hosting the third-best winner unless the wild-card team and top winner are from the same division. In that case, the best winner hosts the third-best winner and the second-best winner hosts the wild-card team.

Sports briefs

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — President Ford, a Michigan football star in college, had words of congratulation for another school from his home state Saturday after Northern Michigan won the national small-college football title.

"He said he watched last week's game and this week's and told me it was a typical Michigan team that never gave up," said Coach Gil Krueger after the five-minute telephone conversation in his team's locker room.

Northern Michigan won the NCAA Division II championship by defeating Western Kentucky 16-14 in the Camellia Bowl.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)— The California Angels baseball club has named Jimy Williams to manage the Salt Lake Gulls of the Pacific Coast League.

Williams is the fourth Salt Lake manager since the team began its affiliation with the Angels in 1971. Williams follows Del Rice, who moved the team to the championship that year, Les Moss and Norm Sherry.

At 32, Williams is the youngest manager in the team's history. Last year he coached El Paso to a third-place divisional finish in the Texas League with a 62-71 record.

RABAT, Morocco (AP) — Bill Casper won the $100,000 international golf tournament on the Royal Dar es-Salaam course for the second time in three years Saturday with an 11-stroke lead over his fellow Americans Ron Cerrudo and Tommy Aaron after four days of play.

Casper, who has coached King Hassan II and helped to design the course, received a $16,000 first prize by shooting a final-round four-under-par 68.

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Chuck Fairbanks, coach of the New England Patriots, was named Saturday to direct the North team in the 27th annual Senior Bowl all-star game Jan. 11.

Jack Pardee of the Chicago Bears previously was announced as the coach of the South squad.

AROSA, Switzerland (AP) — Karl Anderson of the United States won a European Cup downhill race Saturday against junior skiers from eleven other nations.

Anderson was timed 1 minute, 57.18 seconds over the 3.3-kilometer course, with an altitude drop of 750 meters. Anderson's teammate Andy Mills was second, 95 hundredths of a second behind and Erwin Josi of Switzerland third, one full second behind.

Two more Americans, Billy Taylor finished sixth and seventh, respectively.

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — Fritz Brennecke, athletic director at Colorado School of Mines for almost 30 years, will retire effective Aug. 31, 1976.

Brennecke, a professor of physical education as well as head of the athletic department, was also head football coach at the school for 22 years. His teams compiled an 83-127-8 record, including two Rocky Mountain Conference championships.

Rams look for home field edge with win over Packers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Coach Chuck Knox terms it a "must game" for his Los Angeles Rams whose record stands far superior to that of the Green Bay Packers they meet today at the Coliseum.

For although the Rams are 11-point favorites over the Packers, they need a victory to gain virtual assurance of the home field advantage in the opening National Football League playoff game.

Green Bay, in its first season under former quarterback star Bart Starr, stand only 3-9, while the Rams are 10-2 and already have won the Western division crown in the NFC.

A victory over Green Bay would in all probability mean that two weeks hence the Rams would host the NFC East victor in the playoff start toward the Super Bowl.

John Hadl, who was the field general for the Rams when they won the division two years ago, returns as the quarterback for the Packers. And James Harris, who took over in Los Angeles when Hadl left, will be the field general for the Rams.

"Green Bay is a very dangerous football team, and don't forget they beat Dallas," Knox cautions. "Hadl will be ready to play a big game. He's a fine football player and this will be a tough football game for us."

The Rams offense sputtered last week in a 14-7 victory over New Orleans and the 65,000 fans expected at the 1:05 p.m. PST kickoff will be expecting more this outing.

"If we win this game, in all probability we'll have the first playoff game at home," Knox commented significantly. But he won't learn until later which Eastern club his Rams will be facing.

The Rams defense has allowed just three touchdowns in their last 16 quarters of play, but they must stop not only the passing of Hadl but also the running of a crew topped by John Brockington and Barty Smith.

The Rams have their own outstanding runners in Lawrence McCutcheon, Jim Bertelsen, Cullen Bryant and John Cappelletti, yet it was the defense hat did the damage at New Orleans.

A safety brought the first two points and linebacker Jim Peterson carried a fumble back 67 yards for the Rams' only touchdown as two field goals provided the other points.

Last year, in their only meeting, the Packers beat the Rams 17-6 when Hadl was still the Los Angeles quarterback, but overall the Rams lead the series 30-19-1.

With Green Bay this season, Hadl has completed 165 of 298 throws for 1,799 yards and six touchdowns. Harris has completed 156 of 283 passes for 2,146 and 14 touchdowns.

McCucheon leads the rushers with 839 yards and needs 161 in the final two games against the Packers and Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh to post his third straight 1,000-yard season. In NFL annals, only Brockington rushed 1,000 or more in each of his first three pro seasons.

Stags comeback falls short

By DON BRADLEY
PB Staff Writer

A good come back by Claremont-Mudd fell short Saturday night at Ducey Gym.

The result was visiting Cal Lutheran (5-3) was able to hang on and post a 76-66 win. Trailing by 15 points much of the second half, the Stags (4-4) roared back to take the lead, 66-65 with just over two minutes left in the game.

But they had spent themselves playing catchup and Cal Lutheran came right back with a bucket by substitute Mike Bragg to regain the lead for good.

The Kingsmen controlled the ball and the Stags had to risk fouling to get it. They fouled and Cal Lutheran capitalized on free throw opportunities to win.

"It was an excellent comeback," said C-M coach Dave Wells. "I'm proud of the guys. They did a good job with the press in the second half. We were going to press at the start, but it didn't work out."

Wells started Marty Habern and Stu DuVall at forward and paired Johnny Daniels and Mark Sunderland at guard for more speed.

But the Kingsmen broke the press easily and began to play run and gun. After DuVall's basket had pulled the Stags to within a point, 14-13, the Kingsmen outscored the Stags, 18-6 and still were ahead by 12, 39-27, at the half.

The Stags' main problem was they couldn't put the ball in the hoop. They made only 10 of 34 field goal attempts in the first half and 16 of 38 in the second to wind up with 26 of 72 for the night.

Cal Lutheran was 18 of 35 in the first half but fell off to 12 of 27 in the second.

The Kingsmen were without starting guard Ray Fields and 6-6 forward Nate Randle. But Butch Eskridge, a star wide receiver on the football team, stepped in and scored 14 points before fouling out with 11:36 left in the game.

It was at the point the Stags' comeback went into high gear. Lack of reserves had caused coach Don Bielke to stay with his starters the first 15:10 of the game.

Leading scorer Gino Dente picked up his first foul with 4:50 left in the half and Bielke made his first substitution. But it was Bragg going in for Jim Vergin at forward. Dente stayed in another two minutes before the second substitution.

The big forward did not start the second half and returned only when the Kingsmen were threatening to crack wide open. He scored five more points and finished the game.

C-M travels to Cal Baptist (7-1) Monday night.

Carner beats the wind

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Joanne Carner conquered swirling desert winds Saturday and carved out a one-stroke lead in the first round of the 36-hole, $50,000 Triple Crown LPGA women's golf tournament at Mission Hills Country Club.

Mrs. Carner, of Lake Worth, Fla., shot a front nine 34 which included two birdies despite vicious gusts up to 35 miles per hour which bothered most of the nine players. She finished the back nine with a birdie and a bogey for a 36 and a first-round 70 on the 6,511-yard, par 72 course.

Second on the official money winning list this year behind Sandra Palmer, Mrs. Carner was one stroke ahead of Jane Blalock of Highland Beach, Fla., who shot a 35-36, and Judy Rankin of Midland, Tex., who had a 34-37.

Miss Palmer, who has won more than $91,000 on the ladies' tour this year, had problems early in her round and tied for third with Joanne Washam at 72.

Miss Palmer, who shot four consecutive 70s here earlier this year to win the Dinah Shore Winners Circle tournament, still has a chance to become the first women ever to win $100,000 in a single year with a first or second place finish in this tourney, the last LPGA event of the year.

First prize here is $15,000 and a new automobile. Second place is worth $10,000. The select field of nine was chosen from high-point winners in three previous events. The last-place finisher here will still receive $1,000.

Mrs. Carner said she wasn't bothered too much by the winds because she has played this course many times in the past.

"I've played three years in the Dinah Shore here and it's almost always windy, so I'm used to these conditions. I was very confident. I feel this was one of the best rounds I've stroked at Mission Hills.

"If I can play as well tomorrow as I did today, I'll be happy. Unless someone gets really hot, I think I'll hang in there."

Dallas in playoffs

DALLAS (AP) — The calm manner of staid Dallas Coach Tom Landry was shattered by Saturday's 31-10 Cowboys triumph over the Washington Redskins. After the rousing victory earned the young Cowboys a National Football League playoff berth, Landry allowed himself a smile.

"It's been a miraculous season . . . 9-4 was beyond my imagination," laughed the usually stoic Landry.

Landry turned to a writer and laughed again: "Anyone who had been to our preseason camp would agree."

The Cowboys brought 12 rookies back from camp. But it was veteran quarterback Roger Staubach, shaking off the boos of the hometown crowd, who delivered in the pressure-cooker showdown.

Staubach threw two touchdown passes and scored once to rally Dallas from a 10-point first period deficit.

Staubach was crushed by a tremendous hit from a Washington defender on a four-yard touchdown run that proved to be the winning margin late in the first half.

"I bruised the ribs pretty good . . . It felt like I was shot," said Staubach who paid a personal debt to the Redskins. Washington had victimized him in an earlier victory over Dallas.

Landry said, "Roger was tense and throwing the ball too high, but he settled down and got better, and got better.

"You could feel it on the sidelines, the feeling was there. There was no question about it; we were ready. It is one of our most thrilling seasons considering what we came into the regular season looking for.

"Now we are in the playoffs and we will play anybody . . . tomorrow if necessary."

The fired-up Landry went on: "We won with 12 rookies and I didn't really dream of that happening. We'll go play Minnesota in sub-zero weather if we have to."

A solemn Redskin Coach George Allen said: "Dallas deserved to win. They were a better team."

Then Allen, as though he did not know his team had been eliminated from the playoffs, added: "We still have a good football team, good enough to be in the playoffs, but we probably won't get there."

The Cowboys made certain of that.

Dallas has a 9-4 record and Washington has an 8-5 mark. The Cowboys clinched a wild card even if they lose next week to the New York Jets and stand a chance for a division title should St. Louis, 9-3, lose its last two games.

The scrambling Staubach slapped the Cowboys alive after the Redskins had scored 10 points in a 32-second span of the first period.

Staubach drilled Golden Richards with a quick sideline pass and Richards shook off the tackle of Mike Bass to complete a 57-yard pass and run touchdown.

The aroused Cowboys took a 14-10 halftime lead after Randy Hughes recovered a fumbled punt by Washington's Larry Jones.

On third down at the four-yard line Coach Tom Landry called a quarterback draw and Staubach bolted up the middle and met linebacker Harold McLinton in a thunderous collision at the goalline. Staubach got the touchdown and was taken immediately to the dressing room for treatment of injured ribs.

After Mark Moseley boomed a 48-yard field goal, the Redskins appeared to be on the verge of making the game a rout in the first quarter. Bass intercepted Staubach's high pass and returned it 30 yards to the Cowboy 14. Staubach left the field drowned in boos from many in the partisan crowd of 61,091. On first down Redskin quarter Billy Kilmer flipped a 14-yard touchdown pass to Frank Grant who made an acrobatic catch with Mark Washington on his back.

Kilmer, who was sacked three times by the fierce Cowboy pass rush, left the game early in the fourth period with a sore shoulder after being blind-sided on a blitz by linebacker D. D. Lewis.

Dallas led 17-10 at the time on a 20-yard field goal by Tony Fritsch.

Staubach whipped Dallas on a 75-yard drive to put the staggering Redskins away deep in the fourth period. Halfback Preston Pearson made a leaping catch of a five-yard Staubach pass for the touchdown that made it 24-10 with 5:09 left.

Dallas struck 18 seconds later when Charlie Waters intercepted a pass by substitute quarterback Randy Johnson and danced 20 yards into the end zone.

OSU'S NEW COACH — Craig Fertig, new head football coach for Oregon State Beavers, passed up pro football chance to become assistant to John McKay, whom Fertig called "the greatest coach who ever lived."

Steelers win third title in four years

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Coach Chuck Noll had the game ball his players gave him tucked under one arm as the subdued Pittsburgh Steelers savored the victory Saturday that gave them their third division title in four seasons.

"It's a feeling of great warmth inside," Noll said after the Steelers gained a home playoff berth and their 11th straight victory by crushing the Cincinnati Bengals 35-17.

"You get excited if you win when you don't expect to," Noll added as he surveyed a calm locker room.

"We expect to win," added the coach, who was carried off the field four years ago by jubilant players after Pittsburgh won its first division title ever.

The Bengals, 10-3, who still can gain a wild-card playoff berth by beaung San Diego in the final regular-seaon game next Sunday, came here with hope of catching Pittsburgh in the Central Division of the American Football Conference.

"We were simply overwhelmed," said Bengal Coach Paul Brown after the Steelers dominated with the help of two touchdowns and 118 yards rushing by Franco Harris.

"There is no question Pittsburgh was a superior football team today. They blew us out," said Brown, whose team could conceivably return here for a playoff meeting.

The Steeler defense, which forced two damaging turnovers, played for the fourth time in five games without All-Pro tackle Joe Greene.

"This team just isn't built on any one ballplayer," Greene said. "Shucks, I've had the year off and they're still doing great."

The Steelers, who set a club record with 12 victories in one season, took the lead for good 6:20 into the game when Terry Bradshaw threw a three-yard touchdown pass to Lynn Swann to conclude a 68-yard drive.

Later in the first quarter, the Steelers extended their lead to 14-0 when they converted a Boobie Clark fumble into a 42-yard touchdown play. Dwight White shook the ball loose. It was grabbed by linebacker Jack Lambert, who ran 21 yards before lateralling to cornerback J.T. Thomas, who raced the last 21 yards for the touchdown.

Quarterback Ken Anderson led Cincinnati on a 77-yard touchdown drive midway of the second quarter. The march ended with a one-yard run by Stan Fritts.

However, a series later, Steelers safety Mike Wagner intercepted an Anderson pass and returned it 20 yards to the Bengals' 19-yard line, setting up a 10-yard touchdown run by Harris.

Bradshaw ran seven yards for a touchdown himself in the third period, and in the last quarter Harris ran two yards for his 28th career touchdown rushing, a Steeler record which topped the previous mark of 26 set by John Henry Johnson.

Northern Michigan wins Camelia Bowl

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Randy Awrey bolted 68 yards for a touchdown on the first play of the second half Saturday and Northern Michigan, winless a year ago, beat Western Kentucky 16-14 in the Camellia Bowl for the NCAA Division II football championship.

The sophomore halfback broke a tackle at the Northern Michigan 35-yard line and outran the Western Kentucky secondary to lift the Wildcats from a 14-10 halftime deficit.

Dan Harves then missed the extra point, but Western Kentucky could not take advantage of the break.

The Hilltoppers drove from their 17 to the Northern Michigan eight in the fourth quarter, but Barry Henry's 25-yard field goal try into a stiff wind sailed just wide with 7:05 to play.

Northern Michigan, 0-10 in 1974, finished the season with a 13-1 record, including three victories in the postseason playoffs. Western Kentucky wound up 11-2.

The favored Kentuckians dominated the first half with a powerful ground attack.

Tailback Lawrence Jefferson, who gained 161 yards in 34 carries, darted in from the two in the first quarter, and freshman quarterback Steve Larrimore passed 25 yards to Bob Hobby in the second period for a 14-3 lead.

The Wildcats got back into the game late in the first half when Steve Mariucci threw a long pass to Maurice Mitcell, who caught the ball after defender Roy Kesterson fell down and ran it in for a 49-yard touchdown play.

OCHS tops Webb for third place

Ontario Christian forward John VanderSchaff scored 14 points and center Hank Bouwman added 13 Saturday afternoon as the Knights nipped Webb School, 52-50, for third place in the Western Tournament at Azusa Pacific College.

Bouwman also grabbed 11 rebounds and VanderSchaff hauled down 10 to aid the OCHS effort.

Webb forward Marshall Morton turned in a fine game for the Gauls, throwing in a game-high 18 points and grabbing 18 rebounds. Webb center Doug Seaborne added 13 points and swingman Kerry Tims came off the bench to score nine.

The Knights had an eight point lead after three quarters, and just managed to hold off the Gauls, who scored 20 points in the final quarter.

OCHS raised its season mark to 3-2, while Webb fell to 2-4.

Meanwhile, in the consolation finals of the Temple City Tournament, Walnut fell to South Hills, 49-39.

Center Hans Meyer and forward Eric Spindler each scored 10 points for the Mustangs, but Rich Garwacki pumped in 17 to lead South Hills to victory.

Walnut, 2-3, will open the Laguna Beach Tournament Tuesday.

Carroll balks at White Sox trade

CINCINNATI (AP) — Veteran reliever Clay Carroll, who was traded Friday night by the world champion Cincinnati Reds, said Saturday that he has not given his approval to a trade that would send him to the Chicago White Sox.

Carroll, the oldest and highest paid member of the Cincinnati pitching staff, has the right to veto the trade since he is a 10-year major league veteran.

He said he is leaving the matter in the hands of his attorney Jerry Kapstein of Springfield, Va.

Kapstein said he began negotiating Saturday with White Sox General Manager Roland Hemond. Kapstein said he is seeking "a raise and a fine package" for the 34-year-old Carroll.

"I would not be surprised to see Clay Carroll in the six figure salary level next season," said Kapstein.

Carroll, a right-hander, became the Reds all-time leader in pitching appearances this year. He has appeared in 485 games during his eight seasons in Cinnati. The former mark of 484 was held by Joe Nuxhall.

Kapstein said he hoped to have the issue resolved "in the next two or three days. The key is that Clay has the right to approve or disapprove the trade."

The Reds would acquire lefthand reliever Rich Hinton, who would be assigned to the Reds AAA farm club at Indianapolis, Ind., and minor league catcher Jeff Sovern, who hit .293 and 17 home runs last season for Denver.

Monzon KOs Tonna

PARIS (AP) — Carlos Monzon of Argentina toyed with challenger Gratien Tonna for four rounds, then knocked the Frenchman out with a short right hand to the side of the head in he fifth round of their world middleweight championship fight Saturday night.

Tonna fell to his knees and stayed with his head bent toward the canvas while Puerto Rican referee Waldemar Schmidt counted to 10. The Frenchman made no effort to get up.

"He hit me in the back of the head," Tonna shouted from his corner as Monzon's hand was raised in victory.

The fight ended with the same surprised and irritated look on Tonna's face as when he was knocked out earlier this year by Rodrigo Valdes of Colombia, the World Boxing Council middleweight champion. Monzon holds the World Boxing Association's half of the title.

Tonna, 26, a bullish fighter with near primitive boxing skills, landed only one good punch against the Argentine, 33, who was defending the title for the 12th time. The blow, a left hand, was the first of the fight in the first round, but from then on Tonna could do nothing against Monzon's superior skills.

The Frenchman bore in continuously, trying to reduce Monzon's advantage in reach, but clubbed rather than punched and stayed open for Monzon's sharp left jab and quick right hand.

"The punch landed at the back end of Tonna's jaw," Schmidt said of the knockout blow. "It was the best punch of the fight. Tonna could have gotten up, though. Tonna, as far as I could see was not hurt. God knows why he stayed down."

McTear to play at Florida

BAKER, Fla. (AP) — Houston McTear, the 18-year-old co-holder of the world record in the 100-yard dash, signed a football scholarship Saturday with the University of Florida. The agreement specifies that he will be allowed to participate in the Olympics.

Gator head Coach Doug Dickey traveled to Baker High School, about 40 miles from Pensacola, to sign the speedster whose 9.0-second performance May 9 tied Ivory Crockett's world record.

The full football grant includes the stipulation that McTear will not have to participate in spring practice, will play wide receiver to lessen chances of injury and will be able to run track.

The high school senior, who averaged 14 yards per carry as a junior, was heavily recruited by college football coaches despite his decision to sit out the 1975 season, fearful that he would sustain an injury that would end his track career.

"It was either there or Tennessee, and I made up my mind to go to Florida," said McTear.

Douglas Griffith, principal of Baker High, said McTear originally decided he wouldn't play college football.

"I really wanted to do both, but I couldn' make up my mind," the 5-foot-8, 167-pound McTear said about the choice between track and football.

Saturday, he accepted the chance to do both.

McTear lives with his parents and seven brothers and sisters in Miiligan, four miles from Baker.

Javelinas win NAIA bowl

KINGSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Sophomore running back Larry Collins raced 80 yards for one touchdown and plunged three yards for another as Texas A&I University defeated Salem College of West Virginia 37-0 in the 20th annual NAIA Champion Bowl.

The victory was the 26th consecutive for the Javelinas and gave them their fifth NAIA football title.

The Javelinas scored three times in he opening half against the usually tough defense of the Tigers. In 11 games, Salem had allowed only a total of 19 points in the first half.

The Texas A&I defensive unit didn't yield a first down until the opening series of the second half.

Tiger tailback Jack Deloplaine, the second leading rusher in the NAIA with 1,488 yards in 11 games was held to only 17 yards in the first half.

Quarterback Richard Ritchie directed the Javenlinas on a 62-yard, 10-play drive the first time Texas A&I had the ball. Collins ran the final three yards.

The second touchdown came on a tricky, fast-developing end-around pass from tight end David Hill to split end Glenn Starks for 34 yards late in he first quarter. Ritchie ran the two-point conversion.

Salem kicker Mike Brochetti, who had connected on 14 field goals during the season, missed an attempt from the 37-yard line. On the next play, Ritchie handed off to Collins, who started around the right side, broke to the left side and raced 80 yards to set a NAIA Champion Bowl record for the longest run from scrimmage and increase the Texas A&I lead to 21-0. Ritchie raced into the corner of the end zone for the two point conversion.

After a scoreless third quarter, freshman Gary Davis took a handoff and scored on a one-yard plunge midway in the final period.

Freshman quarterback Larry Urvin threw a 20-yard touchdown pass to Starks late in the game. The score came at the end of a 69-yard drive.

Crow named coach, AD

MONROE, La. (AP) — John David Crow, an offensive coordinator with the San Diego Chargers, has been chosen to be athletic director and head football coach at Northeast Louisiana University.

Crow, 40, is a Louisiana native who won the Heisman Trophy and was a unanimous All America halfback pick in 1957 when he played college ball under Paul "Bear" Bryant at Texas A&M.

Dr. Dwight Vines, NLU's president-elect, said Saturday he would recommend Crow's appointment to the Board of Trustees at its meeting next week.

Pro football roundup

Fran guns for TD record

By Associated Press

While fans fret over point spreads, favorites and underdogs and, in some cases, whether their home-town heroes will make it into the National Football League playoffs or be cruelly left out in the cold come Christmas, there seems to be one sure bet this Sunday.

Fran Tarkenton appears destined to become the greatest touchdown tosser in the hisory of the game.

Johnny Unitas, who spent 17 years with Baltimore and one with San Diego, owns that distinction at the moment with 290 touchdown passes. But Tarkenton, the Minnesota Vikings' scrambler who has never missed a game due to injury in his 15 pro seasons, is just one shy of the record.

And if he really opens up against the Detroit Lions in Pontiac, Mich., Fran will knock Johnny U from the top rung in another record-book slot, too. Tarkenton is just 31 passes short of Unitas' mark of 5,186 career passing attempts.

Furthermore, he's probably only a season away from still another of Unitas' records. Going into Sunday's game, Tarkenton is just 1,771 yards short of Unitas' 40,239 passing yards—that comes out to just under 23 miles!

Already this year, Tarkenton has shot past Unitas' completion record. The record was 2,830. Fran's got 58 more than that.

What it all means is that, by the time his career is over—a milestone that still seems to be in the distant future—Tarkenton is going to own every major quarterbacking record of note.

"Francis is going to set some records that never will be broken," says Unitas, who once heard just that kind of phrase spoken of him. And Minnesota Coach Bud Grant adds: "Francis is setting career records while he is at the very top of his profession."

With Tarkenton at the top, so are the Vikings. With an 11-1 record, they're the winningest team in the National Conference, the champions of the Central Division and appear sure to have a home opener in the Dec. 27-28 first round of the playoffs—which is why Tarkenton can't be faulted for observing: "Football is a lot more fun when you're on a winning team."

In Sunday's other games it's Miami at Baltimore, Green Bay at Los Angeles, Houston at Oakland, San Francisco at Atlanta, Kansas City at Cleveland, Buffalo at New England, New Orleans at the New York Giants, St. Louis at Chicago and Philadelphia at Denver. On Monday night it's the New York Jets at San Diego.

The weekend's action began Saturday with Cincinnati at Pittsburgh and Washington at Dallas.

The championship of the American Conference East is at stake in the Miami-Baltimore matchup.

If the Colts, led by Bert Jones' passing and Lydell Mitchell's running and receiving— can repeat their triumph over the Dolphins of a few weeks ago they'll throw the division into a tie, each team with a 9-4 record going into next weekend's regular-season finale.

But if the Dolphins, with Don Strock again calling the signals, can rebound from their loss to Baltimore, they'll lock up the title and kill the Colts' Cinderella hopes.

With their West Division titles clinched but home-field playoff openers still not assured, the Rams in the NFC and the Raiders in the AFC have to keep winning. Both are 10-2 and both have been doing it on defense lately.

The Rams, winners of four in a row, are second in the NFC in total defense.

Mike Thomas

George Allen's rookie sensation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Last winter, Washington Coach George Allen was telling anyone who would listen that the Redskins needed more speed on offense—a back on the par with Terry Metcalf or Greg Pruitt.

That's easier said than done when it's your policy to trade draft choices for proven veterans and you've used up your top picks through 1978 and your first selection in the annual draft won't come until the fifth round.

The Redskins' scouting crew, however, was able to come up with a running back with speed on the fifth round in Mike Thomas out of the University of Nevada-Las Vegas. Maybe it was luck, but the other teams went for linemen and Thomas was the sixth running back chosen.

Still, being selected in the draft and playing for an Allen-coached team as a rookie are two different things. Allen, who prefers old men on the field, lives by the rule that 'I'm not going to be beaten on a rookie's mistake."

Nevertheless, necessity caused by injury has created even stranger happenings than Allen playing Thomas regularly, the first rookie to start for him since Larry Smith at Los Angeles in 1969.

The Redskins opened with Larry Brown and Moses Denson in the backfield, the same as last year, but it soon become apparent that Brown hadn't fully recovered from his offseason injury. Much more speed was necessary if Washington was going to make it to its fifth straight playoff

By the fifth game, 22-year-old Thomas had replaced Brown at running back. Since then he's amassed some pretty impressive rookie statistics.

Going into Saturday's game against Dallas, Thomas had carried 213 times for 835 yards and four touchdowns, which leads all rookie rushers, and is fifth in the National Conference in rushing. He's also second on the Redskins in pass receiving with 36 catches for 447 yards and three touchdowns.

He has outperformed, statistically at least, the year's top draft picks—Atlanta's Steve Bartkowski, Dallas' Randy White, Cleveland's Mack Mitchell, Chicago's Walter Payton, New Orleans' Larry Burton. Only Neal Colzie, Oakland's fine kick-return specialist, and Houston's Don Hardeman, both in the American Conference, are making similar first-year splashes.

"Each practice you have to go out and, even if it's only one thing, you have to strive to get better," Thomas says. "You can't stay at the same level. To me, man doesn't know his own ability. The mind can make the body do things.

"Like last year at Las Vegas was a great experience," Thomas went on. "We were 12-1. I found out then about the things you have to do to get there. That helped me a lot. There are times, during a game or in practice, when you're tired. But you have to put out. Each day you have to get better."

Allen has marveled at Thomas after each game and constantly comments, "He continues to improve. Right now, Mike is our big-play man. He has speed, he's tough and he breaks tackles."

Brown, beaten out of a job by Thomas, now runs at fullback and says: "What I'm hoping for is that Mike will get to be voted Rookie of the Year."

So far, Thomas has been oblivious to all the attention. One of his brothers, Earl, is a wide receiver with the St. Louis Cardinals. Another brother, Jimmy, was a pretty good runner with the San Francisco 49ers.

"To me, just being with the Redskins is a great opportunity, something I've really wanted to do since I was a kid," he says.

Other first round action has Magnolia vs. Cucamonga and Pioneer vs. La Puerta at 2:15 with Upland vs. Lone Hill starting at 2:45 p.m. Semifinal games will be played at 10 a.m. Saturday with the championship games at noon.

Passing

QBs lead the North

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Their coach says it's mostly for fun anyway, so the North squad in the Blue-Gray football game plans to be led down the Penrose Path. Which leaves everything up in the air.

The Penrose Path is the aerial avenue which quarterback Craig Penrose of San Diego State followed as he led the nation in total passing yardage this year.

Penrose put the ball in the air 349 times and completed 198 of them for 2,660 yards and 15 touchdowns.

That provides a ready-made offense for North Coach Jack Christiansen of Stanford, who says, "Basically, we're here to have fun, along with playing a football game."

If the North doesn't have any fun with Penrose at the helm, it can always call on quarterback Steve Myer of New Mexico, formerly of MSAC. He tied for second in the college passing derby this year, completing 190 of 353 tosses for 2,501 yards and 21 touchdowns.

The Penrose-Myer combination makes the North a favorite in the 5 p.m. PST game Friday night. The passing lanes are quick, handy routes for the makeshift offenses which are common to such games.

The Blue and Gray squads, composed of college seniors, have one week of practice before the kickoff in Cramton Bowl.

For the first time in seven years, the Gray squad will feature players from Auburn University, which is only an hour's drive from Cramton Bowl. Auburn had been in post-season bowls for seven years running and the Tigers weren't available to play before nearby fans in Montgomery.

Along with the three Tigers— receiver Jeff Gilligan and linemen Ben Strickland and Rick Telhiard—South Coach Grant Teaff of Baylor has brought along four of his own players to take on the North. They include Baylor kicker Bubba Hicks.

Calling signals for the South is Scott Gardner of Virginia, with Phil Rogers of Virginia Tech backing him up.

Although Gardner was 11th behind Penrose and Myer in the passing derby, South assistant coach Sonny Randle of Virginia said, "Gardner definitely won't embarrass us come Friday night."

George Blanda

The ageless one aims at record

OAKLAND (AP) — George Blanda looked across the room at Fred Belitnikoff, a veteran of 11 seasons who seldom drops passes but has lost some hair in recent years.

"I remember when Freddie was a rookie. I've watched some guys on this team grow old. Some of them may catch up with me," the 48-year-old Blanda said with a chuckle.

The oldest player in National Football League history became the league's all-time high scorer several years ago and should reach the 2,000-point mark Sunday.

Blanda, in his 26th pro season, has a total of 1,996 points going into the game against the Houston Oilers, a team which considered him too old in 1967 and traded him to Oakland.

"Unless I close my eyes when I'm kicking, I should hit 2,000," Blanda said. "That will be quite a milestone, being the first man to score 2,000 points— and maybe the last."

But he added, "Unfortunately, this is one game where points don't mean that much. If I were the all-time top scorer in basketball, I'd be making all the money. In football, yards are more important."

The former University of Kentucky quarterback has done little passing since 1970, when his heroics in last-minute victories made him the toast of the sports world. He was voted The Associated Press' Athlete of the Year at age 43.

Or was he 44?

Raiders Coach John Madden, 39, recalls that, "When I became head coach, everyone was asking me how I'd handle a player 10 years older than me. Now there's only nine years difference. Either I'm getting older or George is getting younger."

But Madden and Al Davis, the team's managing general partner, don't care how old Blanda is as long as he continues to win games with his placekicking, as he did with field goals against Washington and Atlanta in overtime games this season.

"Lordy, I guess he will go on forever. He's a remarkable athlete," said Atlanta Coach Marion Campbell, 45, whose own NFL playing career ended in 1961.

"I never think about how old I am, except sometimes when I run into men I played with long ago," says Blanda.

"The other day, J.R. Boone called me. He was my roommate in 1949 with the Chicago Bears. He just lost he Fresno State coaching job and he's been coaching for 20 years. When I thought about that, I realized I'm getting to be a pretty old guy."

Blanda spent 10 seasons with the Bears, sharing quarterbacking and placekicking chores with such players as Sid Luckman, Johnny Lujack and Ed Brown. He also played some as a linebacker in the days of 32-man rosters.

Young swimmers win

Mt. Baldy Aquatics sent four swimmers to compete in a meet at Hacienda Heights last week end and all returned with first place honors to their credit.

The contingent was led by Upland's 9-year-old Chris Ryan who clocked 39.9 to take the 50-yard backstroke and and 40.0, to win the 50 butterfly. She continued by sweeping the 100 freestyle (1:17.8) and 100 individual medley (1:29.0), finishing her list of events with a second (34.7) in the 50 free and third in the 50 breastroke (48.2).

Not to be outdone, 12-year-old Suzie Williams of Montclair also swept the 100 (1:05.8) and 200 (2:23.3) freestyle. Miss Williams garnered another first in the 100 fly (1:19.0) and finished sixth in the 50 back.

Just aging up, 15-year-old Claremonter Chris Evans also earned a pair of blue ribbons in the 100 (1:05.0) and 200 (2:22.9) freestyle events, finishing with a 1:18.4 the 100 back, good for third.

From La Verne, 10-year-old Kelly Fealy clocked a 34.0 to take the 50 free and a 42.5 for third in the 50 fly. She stroked home first in the 50-back in 45.3.

The Mt. Baldy Aquatics AAU team is coached by Tom Grall, a member of the U.S. Olympic Committee and by Yoel Kende, a former Olympic breaststroker. Any area swimmer interested in AAU or movice competition may call Mrs. Dolores Weck at 982-3430 for information.

Littler: 22nd year's his best

By PHIL ROCHE
PB Golf Writer

"IT WAS A very good year." Gene Littler could well sing that song.

Littler, who must rank among the favorites for the ninth annual Andy Williams San Diego Open golf tournament Feb. 11-15, finished fifth on the 1975 money list with tour earnings of $182,883.

It was the best year in 22 on the tour for Gene. He took firsts in the Bing Crosby Pro-Am, the Danny Thomas-Memphis Open and the Westchester Classic, dazzling the galleries in the latter event with a hole in one and two eagles.

All of this by an unassuming 45-year-old veteran of the golf wars who had been told he might never play competitive golf again after an operation for lymphatic cancer in 1972.

His recovery became official in July of 1973 when he won the St. Louis Children's Hospital Golf Classic in a tense duel over final holes with Lee Trevino, Bert Yancey and Bob Goalby. His three subsequent first places give him a total of 28 tour wins and career earnings of $1,203,541 through 1975.

This remarkable comeback, which in 1973 earned him the Golf Writers of America Ben Hogan Award, compares with such career highlights as winning the Tournament of Champions three successive years (1955-57), capturing the U.S. Open in 1961, and defeating all the pros in the field while still a young amateur in the 1954 San Diego Open.

Littler, noted most of all for his machine-like swing, has something else in his favor in San Diego. The Torrey Pines golf course site is in his home community, La Jolla, and he knows its seaside layout like few other golfers.

As witness, Littler has accumulated $42,810.88 in seven previous events here, fourth in total AWSDO earnings behind Bobby Nichols, Jack Nicklaus and Paul Harney. All this was accomplished without first-place money, but aided by runner-up honors in 1969 and a tie for second in 1974.

However, even a tie for 70th place at the coming Andy Williams will be an improvement on Gene's 1954 payoff. He won that one by four strokes over Dutch Harrison. As an amateur, he received no money at all.

Building an 8-shot lead after 63 holes, John Neubauer won the Green River championship recently with rounds of 74-75-69-76 — 294.

Last year's champ, veteran Larry Bouchey, who was 1975 runnerup, praised the play of Neubauer. "He drove the ball real straight, hit every iron shot at the pin, and putted very well," said Bouchey. "His score on the third round could easily have been a 64 or 65."

Winner of the handicap division was Bob Jones who scored a victory over Russ Pignato and Howard Remy.

Tournament director was Myron Armstrong.

Question of the week: Who decides whether or not a course will remain open on a rainy day? (A.) It's usually the greenskeeper who takes a tour of the greens, then decides the issue. His word is law. If he says golfers will ruin the greens, then the course closes down.

The new, spacious clubhouse at San Dimas Canyon will officially open on Thursday, Jan. 8, says host pro Al Siskowski.

"We've invited all the officials of both San Dimas and La Verne and a number of other dignitaries," says Siskowski. "It should be a great occasion."

PROFESSIONAL Golfers Association officials say a budding conflict over touring standards has been resolved.

The PGA is composed primarily of club professionals, but the glamor group has been the touring pros. In the past, club pros have been able to enter almost any PGA tournament without living by tour standards.

Sky may be clearing for Hurricane Carter

EDITORS NOTE: Hurricane Carter once was near the top of the boxing world. For the past eight years, he has been serving a life sentence for a triple murder. now, there is hope he may win his freedom. This is a profile of the man and the trouble life he has led.

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Rubin "Hurricane" Carter has led a troubled existence—in and out of the ring, the courts and the jailhouse.

He's fought 40 professional fights, including an unsuccessful middleweight title bout, and a long continuing battle in the courts.

Born in Clifton, N.J., on May 6, 1937, Carter has been in custody much of his life, the first time at the age of 8 when his father turned him in for shoplifting.

He scored 19 knockouts in the ring and was kayoed only once—by Jose Gonzalez on March 30, 1963. But the biggest knockout of his life came in 1967 when he was convicted of murdering three whites at a tavern in Paterson, N.J., the town where he spent most of his out-of-jail life. Since then he's been fighting what he calls the "most important fight of my career," the fight for freedom.

Now, for the first time in seven years, there is hope. The two key witnesses against Carter in the triple-murder have recanted their testimony. Heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali and singers Bob Dylan and Joan Baez have led campaigns to win freedom for Carter and co-defendant John Artis.

New Jersey Gov. Brendan T. Byrne is considering a clemency appeal. And, an investigator has recommended a new trial.

The State Supreme Court, which has agreed to hear an appeal of the conviction, may soon be asked to order a new trial. There are moves afoot to free the former boxer so he can spend Christmas at home.

Carter's father, a senior deacon in a Baptist church, provided the staples of life for his children, holding down two jobs. But young Rubin didn't live in luxury. "The kindest thing that I can say about my childhood is that I survived it," Carter said in his autobiography, "The Sixteenth Round."

At age 5, Carter had his first fight when he found a neighborhood bully stealing coal from the family bin's in Passaic, N.J. The next spring, the family moved to a new house in Paterson, where young Rubin joined a youth gang—the Apaches.

It was with the Apaches that Carter committed his first crime, stealing clothes from a store in an enemy gang's territory.

When Lloyd Carter got home that evening and asked where the new clothes had come from, Rubin was in trouble. His father called the police and Rubin eventually received two years probation for petty larceny, beginning his troubles with the law.

Carter stuttered during his early years, and didn't beat the habit until a Muslim befriended him in the Army and told him his speech problem was a psychological block, part of his antisocial behavior.

FIGHT FOR FREEDOM — Rubin "Hurricane" Carter stands in the yard of New Jersey State Prison in Trenton where he has been imprisoned since 1967 for murder. He may be granted a new trial in the case. He says he is fighting the most important fight of his life.

While in the service, he enrolled in the Dale Carnegie course. He stopped stuttering and said his life had changed. "My attitude, even my boxing ability, greatly improved," he said.

In an attempt to free his friend, Carter found himself in the arms of the man, who was about to drop him over a water falls. Carter said he freed himself by stabbing the would-be molester. Carter was sentenced to the Jamesburg State Home for Boys until the age of 21.

At Jamesburg, he received his first taste of the military— marching in formation. He also received a taste of the fight life; he had two the first day. At the home, Carter said the biggest problem was self-preservation.

During his six years at Jamesburg—before he escaped—Carter's outlook on life changed dramatically. "As I grew older, and more and more embittered with life, I became more and more committed to a philosophy of hardcore determinism," he said. That often meant more fights with authority.

At one point, the institution's superintendent promised to free Carter if he stayed out of trouble for three months. But a guard he hated filed a false report against him and that was when Carter decided to escape. He ran until he made it home to Paterson.

There his mother fed and clothed him and sent him on his way to a cousin's house in Philadelphia. A few weeks later, Carter was in Fort Jackson, S.C., a member of the Army's 101st Airborne Division.

The service taught Carter about pride—he said it was "stronger than dirt, mighter than the sword, more satisfying than sex, than life."

He found solace in parachuting. "It was beautiful. I felt so free up there, just like an eagle soaring over his domain and controlling everything. All the cream in the Milky-White-Way was mine."

While in Germany with the paratroopers, he decided to go in for organized fighting after defeating Nelson Glenn, then the all-Army heavyweight champ. The next day he was transferred to the Special Service and did nothing but fight. Unlike the cramped quarters the other black soldiers lived in, Carter said he lived in luxury.

During his two years in the service, he won 51 bouts, 35 by knockouts, and lost five. Twice, he won the Army's European light-welterweight title.

Carter was discharged in 1956 and returned to find Paterson a changed place, with filthy streets and a changing populace.

"It was still the most beautiful place I'd ever known. Because it was home and I was free—and, as Allah was now my benefactor, I was a changed man," he said. He quickly bought a Lincoln Continental, new clothes and got a job driving a truck for a paper company.

On the morning of July 4, 1956, was awakened by four policemen who put him back behind bars because he was still wanted for escaping from thereformatory. He spent 10 months in custody this time, during which he had his new car repossessed, his girl friend left and his G.I. bill rights were revoked.

A few days after his release, he stole a woman's purse and hit two men in the process. This time, Carter went to Trenton State Prison to do three-to-nine years.

During that time, he lost his Muslim convictions. He became a loner. "I let my eyes do my talking," he said. "They said, 'Leave me alone.'"

Carter quit his job at the prison tailor shop, got up at 4 a.m., did 5,000 pushups and read Sigmund Freud and Machiavelli. Then he would shadow box for an hour, do some situps, deep-knee bends and some more pushups. After lunch, he would run 16 miles in the prison yard.

On Sept. 21, 1961, four years and two months after going in, Carter was released from Trenton State and vowed never to return alive.

A guard at the prison became his fight manager, and on Sept. 22, 1962, Carter had his first professional fight. It was in Maryland against Pike Reed for $40. Carter won a four-round decision.

A little more than a year later, Carter had his first nationally televised fight, at Madison Square Garden, against Florentino Fernandez. Newspapers had called it "The Battle of the Left Hookers." Rubin made it short, knocking out Fernandez in round one.

By the end of 1963, Carter was married, the No. 1 middleweight contender and financially secure. He was a happy man. In his last fight of that year, against then-welterweight champion Emile Griffith, Carter scored a first-round knockout.

His next fight was against Jimmy Ellis, Muhammad Ali's top sparring partner. Hurricane won a 10-round decision.

But as Carter became successful, he had more trouble. The Inernal Revenue Service told him he owed $90,000 in back taxes, a department he thought his manager was handling.

Then he began to speak out on civil rights issues. He told a Saturday Evening Post reporter that black people ought to defend themselves against police brutality. He said the story "brought the entire country's law enforcement agencies crashing down on my head with blood in their eyes."

On Dec. 14, 1964, he lost a 15-round decision to Joey Giardello for the middleweight championship.

By then, he was deeply involved in civil rights. He said legislation already approved wasn't exactly the great thing his people had hoped for. In 1965, the Rev. Martin Luther King asked him to go to Selma, Ala., for a march, but Carter refused, saying it would be suicidal.

On May 20, 1965, he lost a fight to Dick Tiger and said he realized that the "constant police and press harassment was slowly taking its toll on me."

In the summer of 1966, the Paterson murders occurred. Carter and Artis were questioned and released.

On Aug. 6, 1966, Carter traveled to Argentina to fight Rocky Rivera in what was to be his last professional fight. He lost the decision, but it was later changed to a draw when scoring mistakes were found.

New cage league set for Ontario

It's time to count down to tip-off for YBA basketball as registration begins for American's newest concept in a youth sports program at the West End YMCA in Ontario.

YBA basketball, developed by the National Basketball Players Association and the YMCA, is open to boys and girls. Practice will begin immediately following the registration period, which ends Dec. 19. League play is slated for January through March.

Players will receive uniforms, a manual with all the rules, tips from the NBA professionals and a national YBA basketball membership card.

"While this is a basketball program, the ultimate purpose is a values concept to improve the quality of life for all young people, their parents and coaches," said Guy Fish, physical director.

The YBA basketball program is nationwide. NBA players will participate in training workshops, clinics, films and other events reflecting the goals of the program, according to Paul Silas of the Boston Celtics, president of the players group.

Nationally, the YMCA expects more than 200,000 boys and girls to participate during the 1975-76 season, with upwards of 1,000,000 in the next five years. The West End Y expects 500 players this year.

Merchants and other businessmen are being sought as sponsors to help defray team costs.

"This is an ambitious undertaking, we know, but with the help of the NBA players and others, we think this will make a tremendous impact on the youth of the West End," said Fish.

All registration information for YBA basketball is available at the West End YMCA

Flag football

Local gridders win youth title

The Pomona Park and Recreation Department's boys fifth and sixth grade all-star flag football team captured the San Gabriel Valley Municipal Athletic Association title last week. The victory entitles Coach Neil Watson's squad to advance on to the Southern California Municipal Athletic Federation finals in Azusa.

Watson's team scored four straight wins in the San Gabriel Valley Municipal Athletic Association's affair. They opened with a 8-0 triumph over San Dimas and followed with a 13-0 victory over El Monte. Next they bested Baldwin Park, 8-0, and then defeated La Puente, 18-12 for the title.

Pomona will open SCMAF play next Saturday at 9 a.m., in Azusa's Memorial Park. Their opponent has not been determined. Three straight victories are needed to annex the championship.

Coach Watson feels it has been a team effort to this point. He is reluctant to single out any one player.

Tournament officials, however, noted that half back Anthony Jackson scored all but one of Pomona's touchdowns. Don Bowshier was cited for his outstanding defensive play while quarterback Robert Akers impressed most with his field leadership.

Pomona's other two entries in the SGVMAA tournament did not fare as well as the fifth and sixth grade squad. Vic Carrasco's third and fourth graders roared past Walnut, 26-0, before losing to Rosemead 13-6.

Coach Mark Lambert's seventh and eighth grade team fell in the opening round to La Puente, 20-6. The only consolation for the older boys was that their opponent went on to win the title.

The Pomona rosters:

Third and fourth grade — Arthur Bell, Dnny Rodriguez, Oscar Ruacho, Danny Carrasco, David McKinney, Orlando Perez, Alfred Burress, Kerry Belcher, Derrick Brown, Michael Brown, Tony Bryant, Kevin Jones, Phillip Luian, Marcas Toscano, George Phillips and Jerry Odell. Coach Victor Carrasco, Assistant Coach Melin Pearson.

Fifth and sixth grade — Anthony Jackson, Rudy Parra, Erick Northrup, Kenny Jordan, Frank White, Ondre Clark, Emilio Ceballos, Kerth Smith, Juan Sanches, Joe Sanabria, Fontay Gylpeppos, Jerry Anderson, David Anderson, Steve Busby, Don Bowshier, and Robert Akers. Coach Neil Watson.

Kemp wants Blanda to run for office

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Former quarterback Jack Kemp, a congressman from New York, says he will ask Oakland Raiders placekicker George Blanda if he wants to run for Congress, the Sacramento Bee reported Thursday.

Kemp, former San Diego Charger and Buffalo Bills star, said other Republicans have asked him to sound out the 48-year-old Blanda, but he had not yet done so.

Kemp said he was reluctant to discuss Blanda as a potential candidate because he didn't want Blanda to read about it first in the newspapers.

However, he said he had doubts that Blanda would jump at the chance because "the guy is in love with football."

Kemp played against Blanda in several American Football League championship games, when Blanda quarterbacked the Houston Oilers against the Chargers in the early 1960s.

California Republicans who have been in on conversations about Blanda as a candidate say he might run against Democrat Rep. Ronald V. Dellums in the 8th Congressional Distict, which includes Oakland and Berkeley, the paper said.

The Bee said Kemp indicated that congressional Republicans have been unsuccessful so far in luring several other professional football players into running for the House.

They include Bart Starr, coach of the Green Bay Packers; quarterback Bob Griese and linebacker Nick Buoniconti, both of the Miami Dolphins.

Baltimore fans toot Colts to victory with kazoos

BALTIMORE (AP) — A new fad is sweeping through Baltimore as residents have found a musical way to express their affection for the Colts—via kazoos.

Thousands of kazoos will toot the Colt fight song when Baltimore takes on the Miami Dolphins today for the National Football League's Eastern Division title.

The kazoo guru who masterminded this scheme says Memorial Stadium will sound like "the 17-year locusts have returned early."

"I sure hope it doesn't distract Don Shula or his players any," quipped Hymie the Kazoo Guru, who has asked to remain anonymous so his mother won't yell at him.

Most novelty shops around the city have been bought dry and wholesale toy houses are sending to Philadelphia to fill hundreds of orders by newly-addicted kazoo fans.

A local beer distributorship was forced to hand out kazoos made in Hong Kong at a pep rally for the Colts this week.

"The Communists are trying to undermine the Colts," Hymie said about the shortage of kazoos. "And I don't give a toot about detente."

Hymie estimates more than 1,500 kazoos are in circulation for today's game. But it's still not enough.

Thomas Murray, who hangs out with Hymie, has apologized for the kazoo shortage.

"A lot of bars that have buses going to the game have bought hundreds. People have been banging on the front door of my bar before I open in the morning, asking, begging for kazoos. I tell you, it only takes one toot to get hooked."

The craze started as an innocent little toot in the back seat of a car headed for the Colts game against the Kansas City Chiefs. Ray Grueninger, another of Hymie's pals, happened to have a kazoo in his pocket.

"I started playing the Colt fight song in the car. Everybody loved it, so we bought a whole bunch of kazoos," he said.

Besides playing the Colt cheer, fans plan to toot taps for the Dolphins at today's game.

CAREW TIES HONUS

NEW YORK (AP) — When Rod Carew of the Minnesota Twins won his fourth American League batting title this year, he tied Honus Wagner. Only two players in history have won more batting crowns. Ty Cobb took nine and Rogers Hornsby six.

Carew ended up at .359 in 1975 to finish 28 points ahead of rookie Fred Lynn of the Boston Red Sox.

Prothro to return

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Coach Tommy Prothro is expected back with the San Diego Chargers next year despite their poor record this season, owner Eugene Klein says.

"He's an employe of the club and I expect him to be back next year," said Klein on a radio interview show Wednesday night.

The same, he said, is true of Harland Svare, vice president and general manager. The Chargers' record currently in the National Football League is 1-11.

Expanded veterans program is sought

The National Association of Home Builders (NAHB) has endorsed several proposals to rejuvenate the Veteran Administration's housing programs, including a bill which would extend housing benefits to veterans who had served in the armed forces between the end of World War II and the beginning of the Korean conflict.

In a written statement presented to the Senate Veteran's Affairs Committee, NAHB President J. S. Norman, Jr., of Houston, also supported a measure which would increase the maximum mortgage limit of the VA Direct Loan Program to $30,000 from $21,000 and to $35,000 from $25,000 in high cost areas. He noted this program often constitutes the only way veterans can afford to buy homes in rural communities and small towns.

Noting that the number of units built under the VA programs has fallen sharply in the last two years, Norman blamed the drop on extremely high interst rates, spiraling land, construction and labor costs and other inflationary pressures.

"High interest rates have priced the majority of potential home purchasers out of the market," he wrote. "In addition, the maximum mortgage and loan limits in many of the government programs such as the VA Direct Home Loan Programs are just not realistic in light of today's costs."

Norman endorsed a proposal which would lower interest rates to 7½ per cent for $5 billion worth of VA guaranteed mortgages. The current VA rate is 9 per cent.

Under the proposed Senate bill, the $5 billion would come from the National Service Life Insurance Fund which currently invests in government bonds and securities.

"Permitting an investment of up to $5 billion in VA home mortgages at 7½ per cent rate offers security and protection to the fund and an increased yield" and would make over 175,000 units available to qualified veterans, he said.

Norman also urged the VA to review its policy on sections of the Veteran's Housing Act of 1975 which authorize the VA to guarantee mortgage loans for the purchase of condominium units by veterans. Condominiums which maintain the right of first refusal and restrictions on leasing are ineligible for VA guaranteed mortgage loans.

Since it is almost impossible to get the legal documents creating the condominium estate changed once they are written, filed and distributed to the public, NAHB recommended that existing condominiums completed before new law was enacted (May 7, 1975) be exempt from the VA regulations on the right of first refusal and restrictions on leasing. Norman said that the VA's present regulations are eliminating from eligibility condominium units in California, Michigan and Florida, where there are existing projects with large unsold inventories.

Two new model homes so innovative in architectural and floor plan styling that the builder rates them as deserving a grand opening event of their own will be displayed today at Lewis Homes-Alta Loma.

The homes, one designed with three bedrooms and the other with four, are one-story in elevation and are offered in a variety of exterior motifs and up to 1,789 square foot floor plans.

Large lot sites are credited with adding to the attractiveness of the homes, which are priced from $40,800.

Home seekers attending the premiere will also see other recently opened single-story and two-story plans. Site of the community is at Carnelian Avenue, one-half mile north of 19th Street, in Alta Loma.

Wood-burning fireplaces, mirrored master bedroom wardrobe doors and ceramic tile kitchen counters are among the features. One plan displays 2,194 square feet of living area and incorprates a powder room and a two-car garage.

Randall Lewis, marketing director, said that viewers who have visited the community have been attracted to the generous use of ceramic tiling both in the entry floor and in the kitchen counters.

Luminous baths and kitchen ceilings also are included. Lewis Homes-Alta Loma may be reached from the San Bernardino Freeway or Foothill Boulevard by turning north on Vineyard Avenue (which becomes Carnelian Street) and continuing on Carnelian one-half mile beyond 19th Street.

PREMIERE SHOWING — This drawing depicts one of two model homes on display today at Lewis Homes-Alta Loma housing project. Homes, built on large lots, are priced from $40,800.

Realtors install officers

Mark Warren was officially installed as new president of the Pomona Valley Board of Realtors at the group's annual dinner-dance held at the Diamond Bar Country Club.

In taking office, he pledged to continue programs to enhance the area served by the board and expressed optimism about the Pomona Valley's future.

Warren, associated with Clyde Warren Realty, succeeded Walter Arnold as board president. For his service during the past year, Arnold was presented a certificate of appreciation by Assemblyman Bill McVittie, D-65th Dist.

Reviewing the past year's activities, Arnold emphasized the significant increase in the number of properties listed and sold thus far in 1975 as compared to last year.

Edward A. Poore of El Monte, the retiring 26th District regional vice president, dismissed the 1975 directors and officers. He presented certificates to retiring directors Rex Booth, Fern Spaulding and Peggy Vick.

Anthony Beletrutti of Ontario, the new regional vice president, installed Charles Canfield Jr., Mary Dorsey and William W. Garrison, the new officers and directors.

New generating station planned

Southern California Edison Co. has signed a contract with the General Electric Co. valued at approximately $150 million to provide combined-cycle generating equipment for the utility's proposed Lucerne Valley Generating Station.

The estimated $726 million facility is planned for the high desert section of San Bernardino County, approximately 38 miles east of Victorville. SCE says it will generate 1290-megawatts of power and is required to help meet Edison customers' electric needs in the early 1980s.

Because a number of federal, state and county regulatory agencies must give approval before construction could start in the late 1970s, project Manager Tom Reed explained:

"Edison is contracting with GE at this time in order to gain shop space priority for equipment deliveries in 1979. The preliminary engineering work must be completed well in advance in order to obtain state and local regulatory approvals," said Tom Reed, project manager.

According to the contract, GE will supply three combined-cycle modules, each with five combustion turbine-generators and one steam turbine-generator.

Edison has an application for the Lucerne Valley project before the California Public Utilities Commission and hearings on the environmental impact statement are expected to commence sometime next year, Reed explained.

"At this time, Edison plans to proceed with only the engineering and expenditures necessary to obtain regulatory approvals so it is not committed to significant equipment and construction costs until after full approval of the project."

Economic and environmental advantages of the combined-cycle installation at Lucerne Valley involve two primary factors: The relatively low capital-equipment costs and the fact that these plants consume much less water (about one-third the amount) than conventional fossil-fired plants of equivalent size. This is particularly significant with water at a premium in the arid Southwest.

Vulcanized rubber was successfully produced by Charles Goodyear in 1844.

'Hindenburg' to be newest disaster film

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Because of what happened during 34 seconds in 1937, the name of Herb Morrison will be forever recorded in broadcasting history.

An alert, ambitious newscaster at WLS in Chicago, Morrison talked his bosses into sending him to Lakehurst, N.J., to record a word picture of the dirigible Hindenburg arriving from a trans-Atlantic flight. It was something of a novelty, since all radio was live in those days.

Morrison and his engineer arrived for the dawn mooring, then waited all day as the Hindenburg was delayed. Finally at dusk the huge airship loomed out of the east, and Morrison began recording his spiel.

"I talked for eight minutes before the explosion," recalls Morrison, now 70 and still a glib talker. "Then I heard the rending, cracking sounds as the gas blew up in a mass of explosions."

He had been saying, "The sun is striking the windows of the observation deck in the westward side and sparkling like glittering jewels on the background of black velvet."

Then he gasped: "Oh! ... Oh! ... Oh! ... It's burst into flames ... Get out of the way, please; oh, my, this is terrible ... It is burning, it's falling ... This is one of the worst catastrophes in the world ... It's a terrific crash, ladies and gentlemen ... It's smoke and it's flames ... I don't believe it ... I'm going to have to stop for a minute ... This is the worst thing I have ever witnessed ... All the humanity! ..."

No one who has ever heard the recording can forget the raw anguish of Morrison's voice. It will be repeated in Robert Wise's new film, "The Hindenburg," which Universal will release at Christmas. Morrison will be portrayed by actor Greg Mullavey, but the voice will be heard as it was recorded on that May 6, 38 years ago.

Morrison was here from his Morgantown, W.Va., home to help publicize the $8-million movie. Naturally the events of the disaster remain vivid in his mind.

"The explosion lasted only 34 seconds," he recalled. "I kept describing the aftermath, then I stopped the record and went down to the scene and interviewed crew members and other survivors. The entire recording was 42 minutes."

Morrison's broadcast was replayed on the NBC radio network, marking the first time that a recording had been used; a decade would pass before it became a common practice. Phonograph records of the entire 42 minutes were sold in stores, and the Nazi government tried to have them suppressed as anti-German.

The event made Morrison famous — but not rich.

"I never got any money out of it," he recalled. "I had offers to make appearances but the management of WLS wouldn' let me take them. All I got was a gold watch. I left the station in the fall of 1937 and went to the Mutual Network."

Born in Scottsdale, Pa., Morrison began his broadcasting career at Fairmont, W.Va., worked for 29 years at stations in seven states before switching to television at WTAE in Pittsburgh. He was news director for nine years, then turned to teaching at West Virginia University. He still lectures for various groups, taking along the newsreel shot of the Hindenburg disaster.

His feelings on seeing "The Hindenburg?"

"It was just like being back at Lakehurst. It's just exactly as it happened. Greg Mullavey looks like me as I was at that time, and I told him everything I could remember when he called me on the telephone one night.

"I was very lucky. Had it been a live broadcast, it would have been lost forever. But since it was recorded, it remains the only description of a major tragedy in history."

Japan's Torii now painted

BROOKLYN (AP) — Visitors to the Brooklyn Botanic Garden and its famous Japanese Garden will be surprised to find something new. The Torii has been painted — bright vermillion.

The Torii, the largest structure standing in the lake of the Japanese Garden, is an archway or "gateway to heaven" and indicates the presence of a shrine nearby.

Historically, Torii were unpainted before the influence of the Chinese culture upon the Japanese during the 7th and 8th centuries. The change took place because Buddhist shrines were always painted. Today, 85 per cent of the Torii in Japan are painted this color — the color of sunrise.

The most famous Torii is the one at the shrine at Miyajima.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — When my hands are grease-stained, I use a dab of toothpaste along with soap and water. I find this works fast and efficiently. — KERRY.

DEAR POLLY — When traveling, divide any prescription drugs into two bottles — one for the suitcase and the other to carry with you. If the luggage is lost or delayed you still have your medication. — DEBBIE.

Polly pays $1.00 for every idea used. Send them to her, c/o this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY — I am sure we have all run out of facial tissues at some time. For a good substitute take a roll of soft toilet tissue, remove the cardboard insert and the tissue will pop up from the inside. With a little yank, it will tear off at each perforation. This can be put in a decorative container, such as a flowered margarine tub, and there are no more worries about running out of tissues. — PAT.

DEAR POLLY — I used paper towels for packing glasses and china, and then these were used for cleaning shelves where the dishes were to go. — BRENDA.

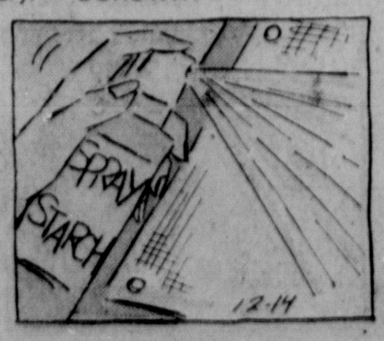
DEAR POLLY — When I block needlepoint pieces for framing, I tack them face down to a board and spray the backs with starch. This not only moistens them for the blocking or shaping process, but adds body to the piece after it is dry. — DOROTHY.



DEAR POLLY — I make replacement feet for my children's flannel sleepers from used fuzzy bathroom rugs and toilet top covers. Cut off the bottom and toe portions of the old feet. Then cut out new feet a bit larger to allow for seams and bulk. Sew on to the sleepers with the warm fuzzy part inside. After the feet are sewed on clip the fuzz in the toe areas a little to give more room. — MRS. R.B.

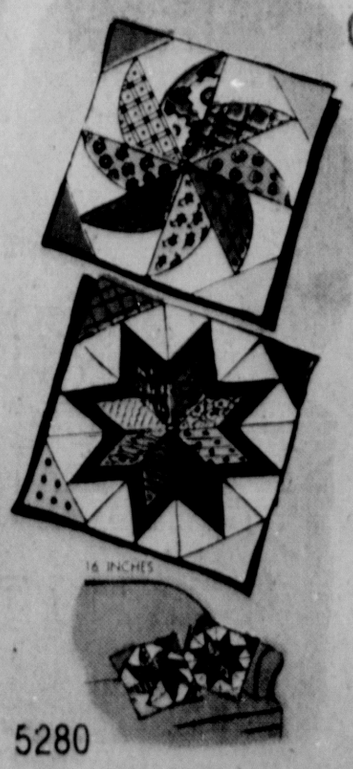
DEAR POLLY — I had to sew up a rip in my husband's work jeans. The only thread I had was bright pink. I sewed the seams with the pink thread and you can imagine how they looked! I took a cartridge fountain pen with blue ink in it and colored the thread along the seam. This could be done on any dark blue or black garment. (Be sure the ink is waterproof.) My husband notices every little thing, but I really put this one over on him. — E.M.



Money Savers

Use those left over fabrics in the same weights to make a set of bright pillows. No. 5280 has pattern pieces; full directions.

'PERRY COMO'S CHRISTMAS IN MEXICO'

A television special for producer Bob Banner is indeed no more novel than a Christmas special for Perry Como. Indeed both have been making them for years. So the inevitable question of "What can we do that's new?" began to haunt Banner and co-producer Stephen Pouliot early last Spring, and it wasn't until Pouliot found himself walking down Los Angeles' picturesque Olvera Street in May than the idea struck: Perry Como's Christmas in Mexico, (Monday at 8:30PM on CBS). What American television viewers have been receiving for years is "Christmas in America" with all the attendant trimmings of sleighbells, snow and Santa Claus. "But Christmas is indeed a worldwide occasion," says Banner, "and though the meaning is universal, it is celebrated differently in different countries. One of the most colorful celebrations of all is in Mexico."

Banner and Pouliot found Como to be ecstatic with the idea and began to assemble the cast elements — songstress Vikki Carr whose pride in her Mexican-American heritage is only exceeded by her popularity in both countries; The Captain and Tennille, one of the hottest performing teams on the current scene. From Mexico, Banner sought and obtained the services of the world-renowned Ballet Folklorico; the super-popular Zavala Brothers & Sisters, a group not unlike America's King family in size and musical talent; song-writer-performer Armando Manzanero, one of Latin America's most talented composers; and the 150-voice Zavala Children's Choir.

"Our principal goal", according to Banner, "is to reflect the Christmas Holiday season as it is celebrated in Mexico — not just through the performers in our show, but through the people, the beautiful, old architecture of a small community like Taxco, the happy faces of children as they break the pinata filled with candy and presents. "We wanted to illustrate the Mexicans' very special Christmas tradition called 'The Posada' — where every night for nine nights prior to Christmas, groups of children go from door to door and, in song, ask for lodging for Mary and Joseph."

Banner alludes that the "warmth" involved in Christmas as celebrated in Mexico has much more to do with people's attitudes and eclipses the fact that there will be no snow in his special. "I hope that viewers will forgive our lack of sleigh bells this time around," the producer says about his show. "But the chiming of the ancient bells on the 200-year-old Santa Prisca church in Taxco represent, at least to me, a tremendous alternative. "If we achieve one thing, it will be to show that the spirit of Christmas, wherever and however it is celebrated, lies within the heart."

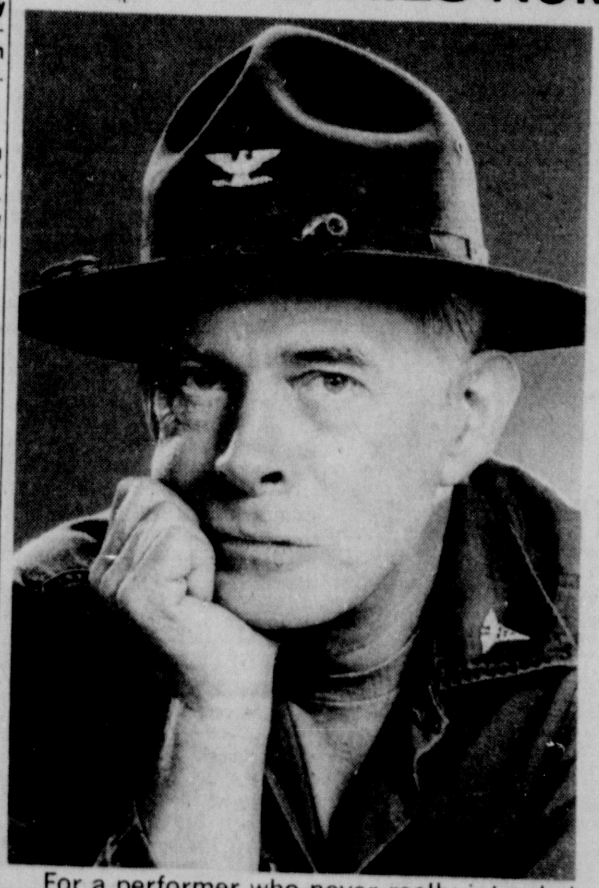
COVER CLOSE-UP

'SERIES NUMBER EIGHT'



For a performer who never really intended to become an actor, Harry Morgan has established an enviable show business track record.

His portrayal of the crusty-but-soft-underneath Colonel Potter, commanding officer of the zany 4077th hospital unit in M*A*S*H, now seen Tuesdays at 9PM on CBS, marks Morgan's eighth television series in a starring role. Running the gamut from comedy to drama, Morgan has been a regular on these familiar series: December Bride, Pete and Gladys, Kentucky Jones, The Richard Boone Show, Dragnet, The D.A. and Hec Ramsey.

As a pre-law major at the University of Chicago, the wry comedian-character actor had every intention of becoming a barrister. But his legal interests somehow became sidetracked through college public speaking and debating courses. He drifted into little theater work while employed in Washington, D.C., and eventually made his Broadway debut in the original production of "Golden Boy," whose distinguished cast included Karl Malden, Lee J. Cobb and Luther Adler.

Though he failed to achieve his law objectives, he finds considerable vicarious satisfaction in the legal accomplishments of three sons, Charlie and Paul, who are practicing attorneys, and Danny, who is studying for the bar.

Morgan couldn't be happier as one of two newcomers to the M*A*S*H cast, along with Mike Farrell, who plays the young surgeon, Capt. B. J. Hunnicutt.

"How often does an actor get the opportunity to move into one of the well-established quality shows on television?" he asks. "Practically never," he says in answer to his own question.

The quality of writing on M*A*S*H is what sets it apart from most other television comedy, in Morgan's opinion. "I was terribly impressed with the way the writers introduced Potter to the cast. At the beginning of the show, everybody was a bit wary of the new commander. But, at the end, he was accepted and already having a belt with the rest of the boys."

As a dedicated fan of the series, he was delighted when co-producers Gene Reynolds and Larry Gelbart offered him the Colonel Potter part.

"I assume they liked my work in the guest shot I did last season on M*A*S*H, and that led to my selection as a regular," Morgan guesses. His entertainment peers also liked his performance as the eccentric General Steele in the 1974-75 premiere episode. For it he received a supporting Emmy Award nomination for single performance in a comedy or drama series.

Morgan was a natural for the characterization of a regular Army commanding officer with a dry sense of humor and a perceptive way of seeing through the slightest attempt at subterfuge by one of his command.

For years he has been a leading exponent of the wry school of comedy as he so aptly demonstrated in such motion pictures as "Viva Max," "Support Your Local Sheriff" and "The Apple Dumpling Gang."

Incidentally, there is more than passing similarity between the horse-loving, old cavalry officer, Col. Sherman Potter, and the off-camera Morgan. For several years, the outdoor-oriented actor bred quarter horses at his northern California ranch in Santa Rosa. Long ago he learned to ride for the numerous Western roles he played.

As is the case with so many comedians, the affable Morgan is equally gifted as a serious actor. In the early stages of his career, in fact, he was virtually type-cast as a heavy. One of the earliest such roles came in the film, "The Ox-Bow Incident," in which he rejoined Henry Fonda with whom he had appeared on the stage.

Having appeared in more than 50 motion pictures, he has acted with a variety of the industry's top names, among them Sir Cedric Hardwicke, James Cagney, Gary Cooper, James Stewart, Spencer Tracy, Fredric March and Peter Ustinov.

Harry Morgan may be the "new kid on the block" so to speak in the 4077th hospital compound. But, in his eighth television series, this vastly talented actor is making his presence felt. Like Hawkeye, Hot Lips, Frank Burns, Radar and Klinger, Colonel Potter is getting his share of "M*A*S*H-notes."

HOUSEWIFE-AT-LARGE

Erma Bombeck, whose warm sense of humor and deep, personal understanding of the condition of American housewives has resulted in a nationally syndicated newspaper column and a regular column in Good Housekeeping Magazine, will appear twice each week as Housewife At Large on "Good Morning America."

For Erma Bombeck, Housewife-at-Large for "Good Morning, America," the new informative and entertaining early-morning program on ABC, "the dreams of the everyday housewife" are more than just dreams. For her, they are the source of national fame as the writer of a syndicated newspaper column, "At Wit's End," which appears three times weekly in more than 500 newspapers; a regular column for Good Housekeeping Magazine entitled "Up the Wall," and three books: "At Wit's End," "Just Wait Till You Have Children of Your Own" and "I Lost Everything in the Post-Natal Depression." As a true-life housewife with a husband and three children, Ms. Bombeck knows whereof she writes. With her droll sense of humor, she reports on the dreams (and the realities) of housewives throughout the country, and she manages to find bright spots in even the dreariest circumstances.

On "Good Morning, America," Ms. Bombeck brings her witty style to national television audiences for the first time on a regular basis. Ms. Bombeck began her career as a cub reporter for the Dayton Journal Herald, where she spent five years assigned to the women's department. After taking a leave of absence to raise her children, Ms. Bombeck returned to writing as a reporter for the Kettering-Oakwood Times. A year later, she returned to the Journal Herald with her material appearing on the editorial pages. Within three weeks, her column was brought to the attention of a syndicate.

A graduate of the University of Dayton, Ms. Bombeck is a member of Theta Sigma Phi and Sigma Delta Chi. She is also the recipient of the Headliner Award (1969), and she has won the coveted Mark Twain Award, which is presented annually to the country's top humorist. She resides in Paradise Valley, Arizona.

"TELE-TALK"

"I decided to save the most valuable thing I could think of — me!" Ed McMahon was sitting in his office above NBC's Studio One in Burbank, Calif., waiting for the taping to begin on NBC's Tonight Show on which he regularly appears. He was thinking about a near-tragedy which occurred Wednesday, Nov. 5, when his Marina del Rey (Calif.) apartment was gutted by fire.

"Strange," Ed continued, "but in a crisis you think of the oddest things. I had just come out of the shower and I thought I smelled smoke. Then I thought it was something else. As I walked past my study, I heard a crackling sound and when I looked, there were flames all over the room.

"Somehow I thought there was a fire hose in my outside hallway and I went to look for it. Now I had been in that apartment for three-and-a-half years and always thought the hose was there. But it wasn't. I rang the fire alarm and grabbed a bathrobe.

"It's a helpless feeling to see your home go up in flames. It seemed like an eternity until the firemen arrived — actually it was only minutes. Seconds seemed to pass like hours. I wanted to save 'something,' but decided against it."

According to firemen attending the blaze, Ed made the right decision.

"They told me," said Ed, "that they find many people inside a burned-out room, on the floor. People think it's easier to breathe there but actually there is little oxygen and when they do breathe, they scorch their lungs and die.

"I finally walked downstairs and stayed there until the fire was put out. "I realize how lucky I am. When you think of other possibilities, well, they're all pretty grim. I'll never forget it."

"The role of God was heaven-sent for me," says Jose Perez, who stars as Hector Fuentes, in ABC's On the Rocks, Thursdays at 8:30 PM. In the series, Perez is playing a role quite different from the one he created as a steambath attendant who happened to be God, in the PBS drama, "Steambath." An actor since the age of ten, Perez found that his career was going slowly until he was tapped to play the deity in the Bruce Jay Friedman play.

Perez has many stories to tell relating to that portrayal. "I came to Hollywood from New York to do the production," he relates. "At the time, I did not realize that the jay-walking laws were so stiff in Los Angeles — quite different from those in New York. As I was dodging traffic while crossing Hollywood Boulevard a policeman stopped me and asked me for identification. I explained that I had left my wallet in my hotel room and just had enough cash for dinner expenses. We got to talking and he asked me what I was doing in Hollywood. I said, 'I'm an actor from New York and I'm playing the role of God.' The policeman looked at me and said, 'Oh yeah, and I'm Santa Claus in disguise.' "

On another occasion, Perez was out to dinner with a friend and the people at another table kept staring at him. Finally, when they were ready to leave, one of the women came over and said, "I can't tell you what a thrill it was having dinner with God."

Perez said, "I was thrilled at getting the part and have enjoyed the kind words for my portrayal. Most of all, I was exhilarated when On the Rocks producer-director John Rich saw the production and said, 'I have got to have that man for Fuentes. No one else will do.' "

With a twinkle in his eye, Perez said, "I guess you could say the role of God opened the celestial portals for me."

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR SHEILA MACRAE

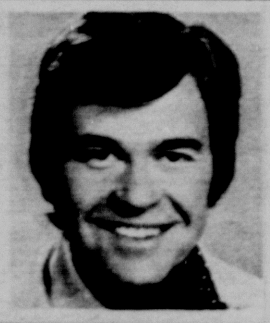
Since you were in "The Honeymooners" (my favorite program), can you tell me what kind of a man Jackie Gleason is?—H.R., Pottstown, Pa.

● Modest, extremely intelligent, a marvelous listener who isn't a great talker. People don't realize he has the potential for being a terrific romantic actor, because he's a romantic. He never uses bad language in front of women. He's very aware, and devours books as though they're going out of style. His "King Farouk-Ralph Cramden" image is all wrong. He's rather insecure, especially around women, and behaves like a little boy or a scared child.

FOR DICK CLARK, host of "$10,000 Pyramid"

Why have you never danced on "American Bandstand" or a TV show?—C.S., Salem, Ore.

● I don't know how. I never learned. My first steps on a dance floor were the result of a gift from my neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Murray. The last time I danced was during the era of The Twist. (It was easy. Talent was not required. Just stamina.) I don't dance well enough to do it publicly or regularly. I'm afraid people will look at me and laugh and say, "With all his experience, why isn't he a better dancer?"



FOR CHARLES HIGHAM, author of "Kate"

Do you feel that Americans have an unhealthy interest in the private lives of Hollywood celebrities?—R.T., Calhoun, Ala.

● Not at all. Curiosity is a healthy attitude. The man who is not curious is a numbskull. The fascination with movie stars stems from the fact that the more you get to know them, the "curiouser" they become. The only movie stars who resent exposure are those whose careers consist solely of a powerful self-exploitation, when they don't have a healthy interest in anything but themselves.

FOR ANGIE DICKINSON, star of "Police Woman"

Give us heavyweights a break, and tell us how you keep so slim—K.S., Fort Smith, Ark.

● Apart from the obvious—keep away from everything highly caloric—I have a marvelous tip for weight control. I brush my teeth as often as I can, because it stops me from feeling hungry, and I have no desire to eat. With me, it's not the eating that's important, it's the taste. I brush four or five times a day with my favorite toothpaste.

FOR O. J. SIMPSON, Buffalo Bills football star

Did you receive some way-out college scholarship offers before you chose Southern California?—Tom Lee, Canton, Ohio

● I sure did. One college offered to build a house for my mother. But the NCAA warned me they were going to check every detail of what I got from the school I chose. At Southern Cal, I got only the standard scholarship allowed by the NCAA—room, board, tuition and laundry. I chose it because it is a fine school with a great football tradition.

FOR JOHN WAYNE, star of "Rooster Cogburn"

What reaction do you get when you see yourself on the late shows?—J.R., Oklahoma City, Okla.

● That I should be asleep.

FOR GAIL BROWN, star of TV's "Another World"

Please settle an argument. Are you related to Karen Black, and is Brown your real name?—J.M., Boise, Idaho

● Yes, Karen and I are sisters. As for the last names, I'm Mrs. Michael Q. Brown, and Karen's first husband was Charles Black. Being Karen's sister is my first claim to fame. My other one is that I live on the site of a Revolutionary War burial ground, and my house is "haunted" by "Lucy and her soldier Lover." June Havoc lived there before we did. She moved out because she didn't like living with ghosts.

FOR ROBERTA FLACK, singer

Did you get where you are through talent or tenacity?—N.S., Anderson, Ind.

● I'm sure about the tenacity part—all black women in show business are potential victims. It's tough for one hanging out there on her own. It takes enormous strength and courage. As for talent, when I was a child, I didn't go for hopscotch or jump rope—I only wanted to play the piano. Without music, I couldn't function. It's the most important thing in the world to me.

FOR MUHAMMAD ALI

Did you find it hard adjusting to show business routine when you did your special?—C.A., Provo, Utah

● No way. When I started I knew nothing about show business. Two days later, when I finished, I knew everything about it.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

I love Freddie Prinze! Since I can't have him, can you help by telling me something about his wedding? I like to live vicariously!—P.W., Amarillo, Texas

● Freddie's travel agent knew the wedding date before the families of the bride and groom did since he made out all the airline tickets to Las Vegas from L.A. (where Prinze's folks live) and from Jackson Hole, Wyo. (where Kathy's parents live). Freddie's mother, delighted that her son had given up bachelorhood, said she had always wanted a daughter. Freddie's father said, "So, you've finally stopped running around." Jack Albertson, his TV partner and a member of the small wedding party, told his nervous friend: "It's not too late. You can pretend it's a vaudeville skit and disappear." Freddie asked: "Why am I doing this thing?" The wedding took place at Caesars Palace, where Freddie made his nightclub debut. Kathy said she rarely watched Freddie on "Chico and the Man" before she met him.

Football's Greatest Runners:

Men Who Know Pick the NFL's Quickest, Strongest– And Hardest to Bring Down

By Larry Bortstein
FAMILY WEEKLY Contributing Editor

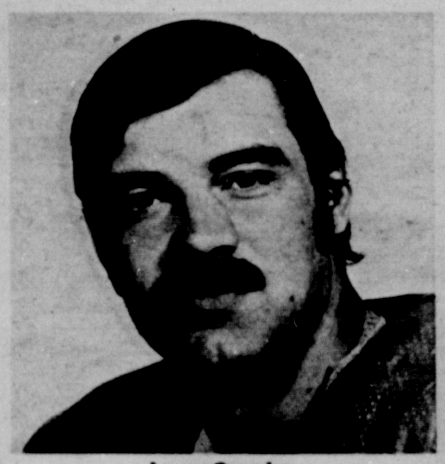
The best teams in the National Football League are usually those which dominate the ground game. Last year, pro teams ran the ball four times for every three times they passed it, and the last three winners of the Super Bowl were led by top ballcarriers—Larry Csonka of the Miami Dolphins in 1973 and 1974 and Franco Harris of the Pittsburgh Steelers last January.

The NFL has many outstanding runners, and they fall into different types: sleek and quick, big and powerful, adept at catching passes, expert at blocking. FAMILY WEEKLY wanted to learn which of today's NFL running backs ranked best in the various skills at the position. We asked these great pro players—Matt Snell, Gale Sayers, Lenny Moore and Jim Taylor—to tell us.



Larry Csonka

O. J. Simpson

Terry Metcalf

Marv Hubbard

"Actually, being able to elude tacklers is more important than speed. A good running back has to be able to give a tackler a leg or an arm to shoot for, then quickly pull it away and keep on moving."—Gale Sayers

MATT SNELL ON THE GREAT BLOCKING BACKS

Former New York Jet Matt Snell set a club career record with 4,285 rushing yards. He was also highly regarded for his ferocious blocking.

"As long as the Jets have a quarterback like Joe Namath, who can't run because of his bad knees, they'll need running backs who are strong blockers. Even if I wasn't interested in blocking, I would have had to become interested or else lose my regular job. Luckily, I had a lot of experience in blocking at Ohio State.

"The Jets' running backs, John Riggins and Emerson Boozer are both excellent blockers, big and strong enough to stand up against onrushing linemen and linebackers. But there are other great blockers around, too. O. J. Simpson is great, but his fullback, Jim Braxton, helps him a lot as a blocker and can also carry the ball on plays when the Bills use Simpson as a decoy. Other good, strong backs who block well and are strong ballcarriers are Sam Cunningham of New England and Jim Otis of St. Louis. They're not afraid to stick their noses in there and knock somebody down.

John Riggins

"Something else: A running back who has a lot of blocking responsibilities has to be really durable and able to take punishment. He's involved in just about every play. Some running backs, when they're not carrying the ball, can just coast through a play every now and then with no particular problem. But a guy who runs and blocks is always doing one thing or the other on every down."

GALE SAYERS ON THE QUICK ONES

Although he played only seven years, the Chicago Bears' Gale Sayers is considered one of the greatest running backs of all time. He is now assistant athletic director at the University of Kansas.

"I hear people criticize O. J. Simpson for the same thing they criticized me for—running inside rather than trying to get outside on every play. But O. J. knows—just as I knew—that you have less chance of getting hurt running into the line rather than outside it. When you run straight ahead, you normally fall in two or three seconds, and you usually land on top of somebody. The fall is cushioned. When you run outside, some guy is liable to grab your leg or your arm and twist, and really hurt you. I got my ankle busted when a San Francisco 49er hit me from the side. But the good runners know the quickest way to gain yards is to go inside. It takes too much time to circle the whole line to try to get outside all the time. By the time you get to the sideline, a whole bunch of guys might be there to knock you down.

"Also, running inside, you have an excellent chance to break a long run if you just get past the first line of defense. The fast running backs, like O. J. and Chuck Foreman of Minnesota and Terry Metcalf of St. Louis, can beat any lineman in a one-on-one foot race. It pays for them to go inside because once they're through they're gone.

"Actually, being able to elude tacklers is more important than speed. A good running back has to be able to give a tackler a leg or an arm to shoot for, then quickly pull it away and keep on moving.

"Also, there's the ability to change directions if a hole gets clogged. The shifties runners, like O.J., Foreman and Metcalf have the ability to change direction so smoothly and surely that the defense is often left frozen in its tracks.

"Another thing the good running backs know is when to turn on full speed. You can't go all out every time you have the ball. There comes a time when you just want to look for a soft spot to fall. But sometimes the good back can lull a defender into thinking he's slowing down or not going full-blast, and then, at the last second, he turns it on and he's far upfield before the defender can react."

LENNY MOORE ON CATCHING AND RUNNING—AND WEAVING

Enshrined in the Pro Football Hall of Fame last August, Lenny Moore starred from 1956 to 1967 with the Baltimore Colts. He excelled at both running back and flanker.

"You've got to keep moving and moving some more in this business. I wasn't the fastest runner or flanker when I played, but I could change speeds quickly and I had good peripheral vision that allowed me to stay out of trouble. I always could catch the ball, and with my speed I could really move it once I caught it. Of course, I had the greatest quarterback of all time throwing it to me—Johnny Unitas—and that helped a lot.

"People used to fault me sometimes because of my high knee action. They said this left me open for a good rap on the knees by a tackler. But I ran like that in the open field when there were no guys near me ready to jump me. When I needed yards close in, I kept my knees low like most other good running backs.

"A guy playing today who reminds me a lot of myself is Terry Metcalf of St. Louis. He's four inches shorter than I was —he's only about 5-10—but he really can catch the ball and move with it once he has it. And he can weave out of heavy traffic in the open field.

"If you're quick and know how to stay out of trouble, I firmly believe you can play in the NFL, no matter what size you are. Mack Herron of the New England Patriots is only 5-4, but he gets a tremendous amount of yardage because he knows how and when to make his moves.

"A running back who can catch the ball is a more complete player than a good runner who's not a good receiver. On the Colts now, there's a great back in Lydell Mitchell. Not only is he capable of running more than 1,000 yards a season, but last year he led the NFL in pass receiving with 72 catches, the most ever caught by a running back. A quarterback in trouble loves to see a good receiver coming out of the backfield as a safety valve receiver or to catch the short sideline pattern. A guy like Mitchell gives a team more flexibility in its offense."

JIM TAYLOR ON STRAIGHT-AHEAD POWER

Fullback Jim Taylor played 10 years in the NFL, and his career total of 8,597 yards is second only to Jim Brown's 12,312.

"I was never afraid to put my head down and run, no matter how many guys I had in front of me. I tried running straight up once. When I got up, my face was all bloodied. I had no real outside speed, but the way we played in Green Bay when I was there was we ran a lot of sweeps which took me to the outside behind a lot of great blocking. But I really like putting my head down and just going straight, hard and low.

"I think Larry Csonka, when he played with the Miami Dolphins, was the best fullback around for sheer straight-ahead power. He could carry the ball for a couple of yards, dragging tacklers along with him, get up, shake himself off, go back to the huddle, and do it all over again on the next play. Since Csonka went over to the Memphis club in the World Football League last year, I haven't seen him as much as I used to. But now that the league has folded, I guess he'll be back in the NFL.

"Oakland has a real good fullback in Marv Hubbard. He's another one of those guys who just gets the ball and plows into the line. I hardly ever got thrown for a loss, and Csonka and Hubbard are like that, too. They also hardly ever fumble.

"The reason why guys like Csonka and Hubbard and John Brockington of Green Bay usually manage to pick up some yardage whenever they carry the ball is their tremendous balance. They can remain on their feet for a long time, with their legs still pumping, before they're finally taken down. Very often, an official will blow the play dead when a guy is still upright because the ballcarrier's not able to move forward any more and everything is at a standstill. Sometimes you're grateful when you're knocked down. You can grab a few seconds of rest before you get up to rejoin the huddle."

"They constantly see a mountain of w before them and believe that all their work equally high priority." Professor Knaus's stu show that anybody can break this habit si by performing tasks just as soon as they thought of. "The delayer should per himself to at least start the task for a short p of time, say five minutes. A Celebrity Cooks

By Perry Como
In Conversation with Helen Dorsey

I must tell you a very funny story! I never knew about stuffing a turkey until I got married. My mother didn't stuff turkey. She quartered the bird, then she put it in a pan with potatoes, put in some butter and baked it. The first time my wife, Roselle, came over for Christmas dinner, I told her, "We're going to have turkey and all the trimmings!" She looked at that cut-up bird lying on the table and asked, "Where's the turkey?"

My mother was Italian, of course, and she cooked everything so differently from the way we do here! Her spaghetti even tasted different. She used a lot of fresh ingredients they don't use today. My mother made homemade tomato purée from tomatoes my father grew in the garden. And her parsley was always from the garden—none of this dried stuff you find now.

Roselle is an excellent cook. We have the traditional dinner on Christmas: turkey, sweet potatoes, salads, cranberries and pies (fresh key lime pie, pumpkin chiffon). With grandchildren you've got to have a turkey. I always starve for about a week ahead. I put on weight so easily!

CHRISTMAS RIBBON SALAD

Layer One

1 pkg. (3 ozs.) lime-flavored gelatin
1 cup hot water
¾ cup ginger ale
2 tablespoons fresh lemon or lime juice
1 can (8 ozs.) crushed pineapple, drained
1 red apple, unpeeled and diced
1 cup mandarin oranges, well drained

Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Add ginger ale and juice. Pour into 4-qt. glass baking dish or mold. Chill until slightly thickened. Stir in remaining ingredients. Cover, chill until almost firm.

Layer Two

1 pkg. (3 ozs.) lime-flavored gelatin
½ cup boiling water
1 cup chopped walnuts
2 cups cottage cheese (cream-style)
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
1 cup heavy cream, whipped

Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Let cool. Chill in refrigerator until thickened. Stir in remaining ingredients. Pour over first layer and chill until almost firm.

Layer Three

1 pkg. (3 ozs.) lime-flavored gelatin
1 cup hot water
¾ cup ginger ale
2 tablespoons fresh lemon or lime juice
1 red apple unpeeled and diced
1 cup mandarin oranges, well drained
½ ripe California avocado, sliced

Proceed as directed in Layer One. Wait until gelatin has thickened before adding apple and oranges. Pour over top two layers. Chill until very firm. Unmold. Garnish with avocado slices and lettuce. Lovely for a Christmas buffet! Serves 8 to 10

Note: Try raspberry or cherry gelatin with red fruits (cherries, raspberries, cranberries) for one of the layers.

Toast the holidays with Apricot Liqueur you've made yourself with dried apricots.

APRICOT LIQUEUR

1 lb. dried apricots 1 qt. vodka 1 cup sugar

Combine all ingredients in large glass or stainless steel container. Cover and let stand from 4 to 7 weeks. Stir once every 2 weeks.

How your Horoscope can bring you wealth, love, success and happiness.

Astrology Today
PRESENTED BY THE AMERICAN ASTROLOGICAL ASSOCIATION
"The Nation's Largest Astrological Society"

Did you know your horoscope could mean the difference between happiness or sorrow; between success or failure?

Picture a long room with doors at each end. In this room there are money, attractive persons of the opposite sex, books that tell you the secret of happiness and many other valuable articles. But, also in this room are bottomless pits, traps, hostile persons and dangerous beasts chained in various places around the room. You must walk through this room, but you may take out of it anything you can.

Now if you had a choice, would you choose to 1) go through the room blindfolded or 2) go through the room with your eyes open and with written instructions on which places and people to visit or avoid.

Of course, all of us would pick the second choice in a case such as this. Isn't it ridiculous, then, that we would choose to go through life, the same situation, blindfolded! Even when there is a means to go through life with a map and our eyes wide open! The means provided is Astrology. The map is our astrological horoscope.

How does it work? Nature's cosmos imprints each of us at the time of birth – when the umbilical cord is cut. We then become ourselves. Until the cord is cut, we are part of our mother. Why or how we presently do not know. The movement of the large solar bodies then times potentials for events in our lives. Astrology does not cause events but is timing of events. But, it's not fortune telling. It's a prediction of potentials which free will can override.

What does a natal horoscope analysis by a qualified astrologer contain? A natal horoscope analysis contains the best psychological analysis of yourself that you can get today. Because, in a controlled experiment in 1960, astrologers beat psychologists in predicting case histories.

In addition, a natal horoscope analysis includes discussions on the following: financial outlook; taxes and inheritances; early home environment; relationships with family, relatives and parents; lovelife and marriage; children; career and occupation; hopes; wishes and goals; and subconscious attitudes. In a major analysis, a one year forecast is also included.

Many people think that astrology only appeals to "way out" unscientific people. Nothing could be farther from the truth. In fact, studies show that astrology appeals most to intelligent and logical people. Famous scientists Galileo, Carl Jung, Johannes Kepler, Roger Bacon, Tycho Bache and Albert Einstein all believed in astrology.

Your horoscope can help you be in the right place at the right time.

Your horoscope can help you avoid disasters while guiding you to your beneficial opportunities.

Did you know that astrology helped the allies win World War II? The allies employed astrologers. The axis powers started out employing astrologers. But, this was ceased early when the famous astrologer, Karl Ernst Krafft, predicted the exact time and place of an attempt on Hitler's life in 1939. Hitler thought the astrologers were conspiring against him, so they were imprisoned.

Hitler turned back to astrology – too late. He read his horoscope in the last moments of the war as Berlin burned around him.

On the other hand, astrologers aided the allies in forecasting the Axis' moves. The most famous astrologer, Louis de Wohl, employed by British government, predicted the exact events leading up to the downfall of Mussolini. He gained the faith of the American military by predicting Pearl Harbor a year before it happened.

More on avoiding disaster, came these stories from a recent article in the Miami Herald newspaper. The article tells the story of a Miami computer programmer, who heeded the advice of her horoscope which warned her of a wrong medical diagnosis. She avoided an unnecessary operation that would have left her a cripple.

Your horoscope can bring you wealth. Famous business tycoon, J. P. Morgan, used astrology to acquire his fortune. Morgan did not make a financial move without checking his natal horoscope forecast.

From an article in the Miami Herald came this story:

> "Stockbrokers on Wall Street are as likely to call an astrologer in this decade as Hollywood film stars would call a psychiatrist in the last. A 75 year old retired financial expert who lives in Clearwater, has made $150,000 from the stock market in 13 years by using astrology as an investment guide."

Your horoscope can show you the way to success and happiness in your career. In spite of her country girl look of 1945, Marilyn Monroe's horoscope promised that she would emerge as an immortal movie sex symbol. However, Uranus in her 7th house indicated that some changes were necessary. Marilyn went from dirty blonde to silver blonde. This, plus a sophisticated upsweep headed her right towards stardom!

Now and through the ages a good natal horoscope analysis has meant success for many people. In other cases many men have missed their opportunity; some with tragic consequences, such as Adolf Hitler.

Will you miss your success opportunities? Will you stumble into pitfalls you could have avoided?

Today, right this moment, you can have your natal horoscope cast and analyzed. You can get it for only the cost to make your duplicate copy. You get the expensive casting and analyzing process – FREE. The article below will tell you how. The means are available, but the choice is yours. *

HOW TO GET YOUR NATAL HOROSCOPE FOR ONLY THE COST OF MAKING COPIES.

by John F. Ford

Send me your exact time and place of birth. I'll cast and analyze your natal horoscope for research purposes. You may have duplicate copies of your horoscope for only $3.00 – the cost to make your copies plus 50¢ postage and handling. You get the expensive casting and analyzing process – FREE, because of the fact that we must produce your horoscope for research anyhow.

Your natal horoscope will consist of nine pages and over 3,000 words. Your natal horoscope will contain your psychological analysis plus a discussion of the following: your lovelife; financial outlook; marriage, family and children relationships; career and occupations; hopes, wishes and goals; and subconscious attitudes. A horoscope of this type would cost up to $250 if done by an astrologer.

I will cast your horoscope with the help of our 360-65 I.B.M. computer, which contains over 24 million bits of information. Your personal computer horoscope will not be the general kind found in paperbacks. Your natal horoscope will be cast from your exact time and place of birth for you and you alone.

THERE'S ABSOLUTELY NO CATCH. I need this information for my astrological research. I am looking for certain planet configurations. If you are chosen as a research subject, I will mail to you a research questionnaire. If you fill out and return this questionnaire, you will be entitled to extra bonuses.

There is no need to worry about finding out about an unavoidable coming disaster through your chart. As mentioned, astrology deals in potentials. Your free will can override potentials if you know about them. In any case, the policy of qualified astrologers is positive astrology. If there is something negative in your chart, you are told what you can do to make it positive.

To get your horoscope through this special opportunity, simply fill out the research computer form and mail to the address given on the form. Include the $3.00 copy cost plus 50¢ postage and handling for each horoscope or charge your credit card. If you don't know your exact time or birth, fill in 12:00 P.M.

If you have any questions, call me, John F. Ford, president, The American Astrological Association. Telephone me at (216) 455-1390. Thank you!

I submit my birth data for research. I am now eligible to promptly receive my 3,000 word natal horoscope for only a $3.00 cost to make my duplicate copy, plus 50¢ postage and handling. I've placed the birth information for additional horoscopes on a separate piece of paper.

Jobmanship

Getting Support From the People You Work With

In his American Management Associations book "How To Get Along With (Almost) Everybody," Elton Reeves points out that many people make the mistake of believing they can overlook their fellow workers, come to a decision, and then expect the situations "to be set in concrete." Reeves suggests five rules to help you get along well with people you work with: 1) Be optimistic. Expect those around you to be women and men of good will. People usually react on the same emotional level that you use in approaching them. 2) Be ready to go a little out of your way to demonstrate your own positive attitude. Offer to lend a hand when one of your co-workers is overloaded. 3) Be sure you pass on all necessary information. This, says Reeves, can do more to tear down or build up your reputation with other people than anything else. 4) Be intellectually honest. This means being careful not to deliberately "misunderstand." It also means that you should avoid gossip where you delicately twist interpretations of what others did or said. 5) Don't expect too much in the way of active friendship. In general, this is a work relationship and all that is necessary is that you go through the day together amiably. Says Reeves, "You will be most successful if you take the attitude that the greatest responsibility for your acceptance or rejection by others rests on your shoulders."

Herbie Mann: My Ten Favorite Records

It all started at the old Paramount Theater in New York. When Herbie Mann's parents took him there to see Benny Goodman, he watched in awe throughout the whole show. Shortly after, 9-year-old Herbie got his first clarinet. His parents encouraged him to practice because it kept him off the streets! He kept at it throughout his teens, and began playing other instruments, too. Herbie Mann has now spent over 20 years as a professional jazz musician—most notably as a master of the flute. From 1957 to 1960, he held the No. 1 place in the Down Beat polls. His current album is Atlantic's "Waterbed."

What in the World!

PETULA CLARK
"Don't go with the crowd"

Did you know Petula Clark was Britain's answer to Shirley Temple as a child and acted in some 20 movies? She told FAMILY WEEKLY: "At age seven I was an established star. My father, who had wanted to be an entertainer, was my manager. My early remembrances are pleasant enough, but sometimes I regret having missed a happy, free childhood. I missed out on a lot of my formal schooling, and when I was in school, I did terribly because of my frequent absences. But, of course, I knew things far beyond my age because of my backstage, liberal upbringing. Perhaps that's why I'll devote myself to redefining education if I ever leave show business. If we want to change anything in the world, we must start with children. If we can't train and educate them properly, we can't do anything well. I'm certain that our leadership would improve if we didn't teach children to go with the crowd. This makes sense when you consider that real fulfillment doesn't come from success, but in having the courage to try new things."

A lawyer talks about modern man's fears: "A strange thing has happened in this century which many attribute to Freud and an overpowering technology—we're devoting ourselves to realism with frightening results. Everyone wants to be 'aware.' Maybe we're too aware. We've become a nation of chronic complainers. I hear people constantly denouncing the quality of leadership, but that's just not the case. . . . We're more sophisticated, so naturally we expect more and demand more. The end result is that we're left in a state of constant fear. Everyone plays the psychiatrist role—we hand out advice at the drop of a hat, but nobody wants to hear it. This creates a dilemma because not only do our problems remain unsolved, but we don't stimulate creative solutions in others. What's lacking is a little humanism in all this realism." Gerard Nierenberg is the author of "How to Give and Receive Advice" (Simon and Schuster, $6.95).

TY COBB
Demonic or intuitive?

How Ty Cobb, the late Detroit Tigers' outfielder and Hall of Famer, added a new dimension to baseball: "Old-time sportswriters believed there was an element of black magic about Cobb, that he must have had a pact with the devil. Nonsense. What Cobb had was much more useful—a mixture of nerve, imagination and courage in preposterous amounts. He also had a fantastic skill based on psychology and nothing more mysterious than abnormally, almost freakishly fast reactions. Cobb himself claimed another attribute: intuition. For him, batting was a study in psychology. 'It's like the study of crime, the work of a detective as he picks up clues,' Cobb explained. Before his time, the base runner was the natural prey of the team in field. Cobb changed all that. Once he reached first base, the whole infield was on the defensive. Ty's main purpose was to make them throw the ball. He knew that if they juggled it among themselves long enough, in their nervousness they'd throw it away." From "Ty Cobb," by John D. McCallum (Praeger, $8.95).

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour

MEDICINE SHOW

Our medicine chest is no treasure chest,
No jewels therein one seeks,
But it's like a treasure chest in a way—
That is, it is full of antiques.

There are bottles of pills for our long-gone ills,
And potions a little cloudy.
They've been there for years, and we've long forgot
What they're for. They look doubtful and dowdy.

Then why do we save them? Here is my thesis:
In time they'll be sold as museum pieces.

A horse-racing enthusiast reported his latest venture with the nags to a friend. "I went to the track on the eleventh day of the eleventh month," he said, "arriving at 11:00. My son was 11 that day, and the eleventh race showed 11 horses. So I bet all my money on the eleventh horse on the card."

"And he won?" asked the friend.

"No," the sportsman replied sadly. "He came in eleventh." —Lane Olinghouse

"No, a 'ballpark figure' is not acceptable!"

"Isn't there a gentleman in the bus who will offer me a seat?" demanded an extremely fat woman.

A small man jumped up. "Well," he volunteered, "I'm willing to make a contribution."

What made our country and the rest of the world what they are today?

Any answer would have to include military conflicts of the past — the battles and strategies, the fighting men and machines, the winners and losers.

That's why military books have always been so fascinating, both as a source of information and reading excitement.

Now, the Military Book Club invites you to build a prized library of such books at big savings . . . with a wide selection of often-hard-to-find and seldom-discounted books on military affairs. The Club offers you a unique opportunity to enjoy hundreds of accounts of battlefield brilliance and stories of personal bravery, while at the same time adding to your knowledge of history and world affairs.

As a member of the Military Book Club, you can step back in time and visit the great battle-scenes of the past . . . on land, at sea, and in the air. You will follow the movements of armies to victory or defeat in the battles of Bunker Hill and Bataan, Murfreesboro and Midway, Stalingrad and Saipan, Coral Sea and Choshin Reservoir. You will ride with the U.S. Cavalry through the West in our Frontier Wars of the 1800's . . . share the fears and triumphs of our submarine men in their silent undersea war against Japan . . . tackle the entire Luftwaffe with outnumbered R.A.F. pilots over the North Atlantic in World War II . . . wade ashore and engage in vicious hand-to-hand combat along with our GI's at Anzio and Iwo Jima.

As a member of the Club, you can choose books detailing the brilliant careers of such World War II personalities as Patton, Spruance, MacArthur and LeMay, and understand the qualities that enabled these men to command huge forces and influence the course of history. And you'll be able to relive, through words and pictures, the adventures of heroic men like Jimmy Doolittle in his crusade for air power, Audie Murphy in his one-man war against Germany, and Horoo Onoda, the Japanese soldier who fought a lone, lost war for 30 years in a desolate outpost. He finally surrendered in 1974, 29 years after the war was over.

Military Book Club selections enable you to trace the evolution of weapons from muskets to missiles, from lumbering World War I Junkers to supersonic F-15's, from crude armored vehicles to the fearsome tanks of modern warfare.
